MRS. HELEN CARLSON

Losing a court case in which she charged her boss with assault, Mrs. Carlson finds herself today without a job and minus a husband.

LOSES HUSBAND, ASSAULT CASE, AND HER JOB

After losing a court battle, when she appeared against her boss on a charge of assault, Mrs. Helen Carlson of No. 1 Marmion street, Jamaica Plain, later lost her job and today her husband.

"Things look pretty dark for me," said Mrs. Carlson, whose superintendent, John F. Regan, at the Boylston street bakery where she worked, was freed after Judge Bolster listened to the evidence.

"My husband says he is through with me. He is hotheaded and grew terribly angry over the affair, both at me and Regan. Ever since it occurred he has refused to give me any money.

"It was not my fault and I don't know why I lost in court. When the boss tried to caress me repeatedly, I prodded him with a knife, and I still have a strapped up shoulder to show as a result of his roughness."

Mrs. Carlson is mother of a baby, Walter, aged two. She is twenty-five. Regan lives in Watertown. In his defense Regan said that Mrs. Carlson had vamped the bookkeeper, Frank Pringle, and had been warned several times.

FIVE YEARS FOR 'TUG' WILSON

Gang Leader Pleads Guilty to Shooting an Officer; Pals Also Are Sentenced

Earl "Tug" Wilson was sentenced to from five to ten years in State Prison by Judge Franklin T. Hammond in Middlesex Superior Court today.

The famous gang leader was sentenced on the charge which led to his arrest that of shooting Francis J. Philbrick, a Metropolitan Park policeman, who accosted him and his sweet heart, "Sally" Doyle, in an auto petting party on Mystic Valley Parkway.

Wilson was also sentenced for assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill Gordon A. Frost, another officer, and Lieutenant Edward Brawley of the Metropolitan police. Six charges of larceny, robbery, assault and theft were placed on file by request of Assistant District Attorney William C. Reilly.

Abraham, Itskowitch, accused of being a member of the Wilson gang, and charged with receiving stolen property and with larceny of cigarettes from the B. & M., was found not guilty by a jury on the larceny charge. He was found guilty on the charge of receiving stolen property and sentenced to three months' imprisonment and fined $300 on that count.

Earl C. "Tug" Wilson

TURNED STATE'S EVIDENCE.

Wilson was brought to the East Cambridge courthouse from Jail, where he has been confined since his arrest last April on the charge of attempting to murder the officer. He was represented by Attorney W. E. Brownell, who recommended to the court that it bear in mind Wilson's services to the State.

Wilson, following his arrest, had turned state's evidence and exposed the workings of his gang, one of the most daring that ever operated in the State.

INDICT CLUBMEN IN BIG LIQUOR SALE

New York, Dec. 29.—A Federal grand jury hearing complaints against the fashionable Knickerbocker Tennis Club in Park avenue, today indicted on two counts twelve men charged with illegally selling more than 30,000 gallons of liquor.

Among those indicted were Rene La Montagne, Morgan E. La Montagne, and William A. La Montague, owners of the Green River Distilling Company, and the Eminence Distillery, of Kentucky. Rene La Montague is noted as a polo player.

R. I. MILL CLOSED BY COMPETITION

Central Falls, R. I., Dec. 29.—Unfavorable conditions and the inability to meet Southern competition has caused the closing of the United States Division Plant of the Jenckes Spinning Company it was announced today by officials.

The plant was formerly the United States Cotton Company.

Most of the equipment with 58,000 spindles valued at a half million dollars will be sent to the Jenckes plant in the South.

About 1,500 workers will be thrown out of employment.

The Jenckes Spinning Company is one of the largest manufacturers of tire fabrics in the world.

WORK FOR 1500 VETERANS ON SNOW

Mayor Curley today ordered that 1,500 men be employed to remove the snow from streets in the downtown section. The American Legion employment bureau was told to send along all veterans who are out of work, for snow duty.

Fifty trucks, 300 single teams and 50 double teams will be used in an effort to restore traffic to normalcy as soon as possible. Private contractors who have contracts with the city for the removal of snow have also called for 500 additional men and more trucks.

PICRIC ACID BOMB KILLED WOMAN

Marshfield, Wis., Dec. 29.—Louis Troseer, member of the Wood County Board of Supervisors, announced today that a large quantity of picric acid, used by farmers for blasting stumps, was contained in the bomb which was sent to James R. Chapman, chairman of the board, and which caused the death of Mrs. Chapman and blew Mr. Chapman's left arm from his shoulder.

The county supervisors have been active in prosecuting bootleggers and also aroused resentment by efforts to construct a drainage project. The finding of acid in the bomb, police believe, proves the bomb was sent by a farmer, or farmers.

LOSES $15,000 IN LOBSTERS IN GALE

Eastport, Me., Dec. 29.—Live lobsters valued at $15,000 were lost by Burpee Wilson, an Eastport fish dealer, when the storm smashed his lobster car. No loss of life has been reported.

One motor boat is the only craft reported lost. Fishermen of Passamaquoddy Bay and the Bay of Fundy

"POISON" STILL IS RAIDED

Police Arrest Sam Baltimore and Send Liquor to State House for Analysis

Police inspectors on the trail of Boston's "poison booze" arrested a man and seized forty-five gallons of liquor in the South End today.

The police, in the opinion of Captain Charles T. Reardon of the liquor squad, have found the origin of the deadly drink that has caused three deaths and about 100 hospital cases here since Christmas.

The raid was made by Inspectors Garrett, Higgins and Norton on the premises at No. 42 Genesee street.

The man arrested is Sam Baltimore of Providence, who has been living with his sister at No. 99 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury.

Baltimore was found in a shed in the rear of the front building. In the same shed the police found and seized:

Forty-five gallons of liquor put up in five-gallon containers.

Four empty containers.

A burlap bag holding a copper container, which, the police believe, was used for delivering the liquor.

TO BE ANALYZED.

The liquor, after preliminary examination, was sent to the State House for analysis.

Baltimore is under arrest as a suspicious person. Further investigation, also analysis of the liquor, may result in much more serious charges being made.

SCHOONER ASHORE ON CAPE

Take Yarmouth Crew Ashore From Wreck by the Breeches Buoy

With the schooner Maizie Peabody reported lost, another ship in distress at sea and two ashore, the storm which paralyzed traffic in New England for twenty-four hours continued to take its toll along the Atlantic coast today.

The Maizie Peabody is thought to have gone to pieces fifty miles off Old Point Comfort, Va. She carried a crew of four men.

At the same time it was reported that the steamer Santa Rosa of the Grace line was ashore off Charleston, S. C., with five tugs and a coast guard cutter standing by.

The Canadian schooner Annie L. Spindler was wrecked at Race Point, Cape Cod and the crew of six men rescued from the rigging by the coast guard after hours of exposure. The schooner was blown ashore today by the howling northeaster but was not discovered for several hours owing to the severity of the storm.

Captain Irwin Collins of the coast guard ordered out the breeches buoy and the crew was brought ashore and given first aid.

At the same time radio messages reported that the steamer Manno-

NO WARRANT, BUT IS HELD IN HOOTCH CASE

Jacob Raditch, Shawmut avenue, took exception to two officers entering his home and seizing liquor without a search warrant, and appealed a three months' sentence in Central Court today before Judge Murray. Judge Murray him guilty of keeping and exposing liquor. He said the Superior Court would find the problem a good one to pass on as Raditch had been in several times before on similar charges.

MASKED BAND WHIPS OKLAHOMA FARMER

Hollis, Okla., Dec. 29.—Frank Day, thirty-eight years old, a tenant farmer living six miles northwest of here, was taken from his bed late last night by nine masked men, severely whipped and ordered to leave the community "before another sunset," according to the story he told county authorities today. The farmer said the men accused him of manufacturing liquor.

PETERS BEFORE GRAND JURY IN 'KISS' BRIBE CASE

Frank R. Peters, wealthy Boston merchant and a relative of former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, appeared today before the special grand jury which is probing the Pelletier-Coakley charges.

Peters figured in the celebrated $10,000 kiss case at the trial of former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier. That case came under the general charge made by Attorney-General Allen that Pelletier allowed others to use the authority of his office to settle civil cases and to extort money from divers persons.

Peters was a witness in that trial. He testified that he paid Daniel H. Coakley $10,000 to settle a suit brought by Mrs. Gertrude Robbins as a result of an alleged attack on her by Peters on July 8, 1916.

The testimony at the trial showed that Peters kissed her once when he went to her apartment to use the telephone. It also showed that Mrs. Robbins at the time was very much disheabille.

4 DEAD, MANY INJURED, SHIPS ASHORE, CREWS SAVED IN BIG STORM

42 MEN ABOARD BOSTON BOUND CRAFT SINKING OFF NEW JERSEY COAST

tor, bound for Boston from Norfolk, was in distress off the coast of New Jersey. There are forty-two men aboard and first messages indicated the boat was sinking.

A radio message later from the Munmotor's skipper to the offices of the Munson line, operators of the vessel said she had righted herself several degrees and that he hoped he would be able to bring her through the storm. Coast guard cutters are standing by.

The City of Boston steamer Monitor broke away from her moorings at Deer Island and was driven across the bay to Wollaston Beach, where she went ashore.

Scores of persons are in hospitals being treated for exposure and accidents due to the storm. The four known dead are:

Fred L. Avis, sixty-eight years old, of Fairfield stret, Back Bay.

David Hodgdon of No. 180 Carpenter street, Providence.

Patrick Turner, forty-five years old, employed by the Frost Coal Company, Neponset.

William F. Chickering, sixty-one years old, of Lakeport, N. H.

Street traffic in Greater Boston suffered greatly. Surface and elevated trains got along as best they could, without regard to schedule and automobile service stations were swamped with calls for help from stranded automobiles and trucks.

Coal and wood companies tried in vain to answer the sudden demand for fuel from all quarters. Many who had let their supplies run low during the mild weather found themselves in dire straights.

Traffic conditions made delivery slow and the supply threatened to give out before the slow-moving trains could fight their way through the snow with reinforcements.

Woonsocket, R. I., is snowbound, Block Island cut off from the mainland and scores of New England towns practically isolated. Fifteen schooners were forced to take refuge behind the Point Judith breakwater in Narragansett Bay.

At Gardner's Hill, midway between Danvers and Salem, 300 passengers of six stalled trolleys were stranded for two hours.

AUTO HAZARDS.

When the storm began, an official of the Department of Public Works in Boston was asked why the 250 men in his employ had not removed the snow from the last storm. He answered he was waiting for "nature to take care of it."

Nature has taken care of it to the point of making many Boston streets traps for autos. Scores of motor cars were stalled. Many streets were impassable.

With all train service impaired, service was particularly bad on the trolley lines serving Hyde Park, Dedham, Cambridge, North Cambridge and Winthrop Beach. Shipping was demoralized.

Fire disasters were narrowly averted in several blazes throught greater Boston. The most critical one was at Nantasket Beach, where heroic efforts of the firemen saved Paragon Park from burning. Prompt and effective work also saved the Washington Theatre at No. 754 Washington street from being burned to the ground.

COAL FAMINE FEARED.

There is danger of a coal famine in Boston as a result of the storm, which is due to continue all day, according to the weather bureau.

Streets in Winthrop Beach were inundated by the high surf that rolled in today, lashed by the furious gale. It is estimated that the surf dashed from twenty-five to thirty feet over the sea wall covering the boulevard and spreading to the streets between the boulevard and Shirley street, 1,000 feet away.

When the tide receded at 7:30 a. m. the spray stopped, but a coating of ice two or three inches thick was left to show the extent of the flood.

One fire alarm system in Winthrop went out of commission in the height of the storm and extra precautions were taken to guard the section from fire.

USE AUTO PLOWS.

Despite the high wind accompanying the snow, but one wire was reported "down" in the city, this being at Athens and D streets, South Boston.

The Elevated system had a heavy force of auto plows in action at an early hour, in addition to the regular electric plows and managed to keep a fairly good schedule. The auto trucks were used to push the snow back from the tracks to the gutters.

Taxi Trailer Takes Home Snow-Bound Car Passengers

When the last street car of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway left Salem for Wenham at midnight a taxi trailer was sent along to take care of passengers if the car broke down or got stuck in the drifts.

At North Beverly the car broke down. Six passengers were in the car. The taxi ploughed through the snow and carried them home.

Train Service on All Lines Tied Up

New York and Boston train service was hit hard by the storm. The Fall River boat trips were cancelled, both ways.

At mid-morning the New York-to-Boston trains were running four to six hours late. Local trains on the New Haven were away behind schedule. Commutation travel was lighter on some trains because persons who could do so came to town by trolley.

The first express arriving today at South Station from New York over the New Haven line was the mail train due here at 5:30 a. m., carrying no passengers. It arrived at 10:05, five hours and five minutes late, after its struggle against drifts, plugged switches and other storm delays.

The Shore Line passenger train leaving New York at 11:10 last night due here at 8:45 a. m., came in at 10:38, four hours and ten minutes behind time.

Next passenger express in from New York via the New Haven was "The Owl," coming over the Shore Line. It left New York at 3 a. m., made up of sleeping cars only. Due in the South Station at 7:48, it arrived at 11:10, three hours and twenty two minutes late.

PASSED ON THE WAY.

The "Night Express," leaving New York at midnight, due here at 7 o'clock, forty-eight minutes before "The Owl" was due, had evidently been passed on the road by the sleeper express, for it was reported five hours late at 11:30.

The "Night Express" arrived just after noon, six hours and ten minutes late.

The Federal Express from Washington, due at 7:48, was five hours and seven minutes late. The New England Express, from Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and New York, via Hell Gate Bridge, due at 8:55, was four hours and ten minutes late.

The Cape lines were reported in bad shape with snow drifted on the tracks to depth of several feet at some points.

From 7:45 to 8:25, when in-bound locals are usually coming in in quick succession, not a train arrived on the New Haven track section at the South Station, except the 7:37 from Dorchester, which came in at 8:10.

At 8:25 three arrived, the local from Providence due at 7:27, the local from Needham due at 8:11 and one from Mattapan due at 7:55.

Bangor Express Is Stalled on Way Here

The Bangor express of the Boston & Maine, due in Boston at 4:50 today, was tied up in snow drifts on the Maine Central line for several hours.

It pulled into Portland five and a half hours late, after a terrible battle with the storm. Engines were changed at Portland and the train started for Boston. Officials of the Boston & Maine report the tracks clear between here and Portland.

Hyde Park and Dedham Hard Hit

Trains at Hyde Park were from one to one and a half hours late today.

Trolley cars ran now and then. The one-man cars of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway found difficulty in making headway through the snow.

Thousands of Hyde Park residents walked from Hyde Park to the Boston line of the Elevated rather than take chances on the one-man cars.

At Dedham the same difficulties were faced and commuters walked to Grove street, West Roxbury, where they boarded the Boston Elevated cars.

Derailed Train Ties Up B. & M. at Salem

Salem, Dec. 29.—For the second successive day traffic on the Boston & Maine Railroad was blocked for a time by a minor accident near the Salem station. A shifting engine ustrck a car of a freight train, knocking the forward trucks off the rails. Wreckers worked for two hours before the tracks were cleared.

Hundreds Hurt, Two Dead, in New York

New York, Dec. 29.—Thousands of volunteer snow handlers were called to the shovels today to help dig New York city out of its first big storm of the season—a blizzard of snow and sleet, which, starting yesterday under moderate temperatures, became overnight an icy gale which threatened to paralyze all transportation.

The storm took its toll of hundreds of injured. From early last evening until daybreak hospital ambulances were bringing in pedestrians with broken arms, fractured legs or cracked skulls, who had fallen victims to the treachery of ice-covered sidfeets. Most hospitals were crowded to capacity, and the problem of caring for new arrivals became increasingly grave as the list of injured mounted.

At least two persons are reported to have been killed in falls on the city's thoroughfares.

The wind reached high velocities. Combined with the unaccustomed burden of snow, it worked havoc with above-ground power and telephone lines, street car transmission cables, roofs of buildings and large trees.

Albany, Dec. 29.—The second snowstorm of the season, beginning Wednesday night and continuing this morning, covered eastern and northern New York with a wintry mantle, curtailed motor traffic and delayed railroad travel. The snow ranged in depth from two to twelve inches, while high winds had drifted the highways to greater depths.

AWARDS SON TO MOTHER AFTER COURT FIGHT

Mrs. Irene M. St. Clair, a comely young matron of Arlington and of Laconia, N. H., won the present custody of her six-year-old boy today.

She won against formidable opposition, made up of her husband, Howard L. St. Clair of Laconia; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Marble of Laconia, and Justice Marble of Belknap County Superior Court of New Hampshire.

Judge Braley of Massachusetts Supreme Court decided, after a hearing, that Mrs. St. Clair did not abduct Robert from New Hampshire to Massachusetts in defiance of a decree by Judge Marble, giving the body of him.

Judge Braley decided that young Mrs. St. Clair had a right to bring Robert to Massachusetts, and that, for a person, he should remain in her custody.

The hearing was on habeas corpus grandparents for possession of the boy.

Mrs. St. Clair is living with her sister at No. 19 Newland road, Arlington, and Robert is attending school in that town.

Mrs. St. Clair declared that she had not seen Valler since November. She was cautioned by Judge Braley to have nothing further to do with him. She promised she would not.

DRUGGIST SAYS HE WAS FRAMED WITH GIN

The sale of an innocent bottle of disinfectant gets one into a barrel of trouble sometimes.

J. H. O'Sullivan, a Belmont druggist, today told Judge Anderson of the Federal Court that it was such a sale that cost him his permit to sell liquor. O'Sullivan's permit was revoked by Prohibition Director Potter's office some time ago. He was charged with selling a bottle of gin to Mrs. Margaret Noonan of Belmont.

Today Judge Anderson is reviewing the case. O'Sullivan testified that on January 17, 1922, he sold Mrs. Noonan a bottle of disinfectant, and that as the woman was leaving the store a prohibition officer stepped up to her and asked her what she had bought.

"A bottle of gin" was the reply, according to O'Sullivan. Witness then testified that he demanded the officer search the woman and produce the gin. He said that after some time had elapsed a bottle of gin was discovered.

O'Sullivan declared to the judge that Mrs. Noonan had "framed" him. "She told me," said O'Sullivan, "that she would make me pay dollar for dollar for every drop of liquor I had sold her husband. She also told me that if I would give her the money for a fur coat she would not testify against me."

Oil Thicker Than Blood No Size In Salesmanship Why Women Talk so Much Life Grows Longer

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company

IT SEEMS that our little "observer" at the Lausanne Conference supported the British in their efforts to keep the Turks from getting Mosul and the oil lands.

"Blood is thicker than water," you know, and oil is a great deal thicker than both put together.

The British and the American oil companies fight each other, but they unite usually when it comes to taking oil lands away from the Turks.

SOMEBODY SAID tall, heavy men make the best salesmen. Dr. Kitson, who teaches psychology in Indiana University, says size has nothing to do with salesmanship. He is right. A tall, heavy, solemn man may have a certain advantage in getting past the office boy, but that's all.

Mental and physical intensity, directed by intelligence, is what makes salesmanship. The days when a round stomach, heavy gold watch chain stretched across it, and a fine set of whiskers helped a man in business have gone by—although some doctors seem not to know it.

A LITTLE WHILE AGO a citizen of Atlanta asked: "Why do women weep so much more than men?"

New Dr. Brill of the University of New York tells "Why women talk so much more than men."

He says women never had enough intellectual work to keep their minds busy; therefore female mental energy has been turned into aimless conversation.

Women creating from twelve to twenty children and dying under forty have had little time or opportunity for intellectual work that is sure. Civilizing men, after making them, was their job.

There is, however, no certainty that women talk more than men. Woman's talkativeness is man's theory. For uninterrupted and aimless conversation nothing exceeds a group of average idle men.

THE AVERAGE LENGTH of life in the United States is fifty-six years, fifteen years more than it was in 1870. To calculate the value, in money alone, of that scientific achievement is impossible.

Length of life measures civilization and intelligence. Life is longest in New Zealand. There the average is sixty years. It is shortest in India, where for thousands of years there has been no progress, except such as England has forced upon an unwilling race.

India's average of life is twenty-four years. Dr. Farrand, president of Cornell, supplies the statistics.

Not so long ago, the second biggest city in France had neither man nor woman past fifty years of age. Sixty was once very old, and seventy extraordinary.

Montaigne speaks of his old age at a time when he was not yet fifty.

WHEN YOU ARE OLD, death is easy, even pleasant. It is the next, most natural step when everything else has happened.

Consider Sarah Bernhardt, how calmly she takes the discouraging statement of her doctors.

Having worked hard for nearly eighty years, she defies death, talks cheerfully with her friends, disobeys the doctors, suffers no pain. Death in old age after a life well spent is the reward of rest. It is as Victor Hugo said, "Like the end of a beautiful day."

IF YOU LIKE ADVENTURE, start for the new diamond fields in Dutch Guiana. The existence of diamond mines has long been known, proved by the occasional stones washed down by the rivers. Now the diamond-bearing clay seems to be found.

Adventurers of all kinds will rush in, to lose their time and money. When the dust settles some man that never went to the diamond fields will be found controlling the whole thing, deciding

LOVE SICK ON HIS TRAIL

Pastor Lawson Says He'll Stand by Original One; Offers to Aid the Lovesick

Swamped with mail from aspirants for the honor of becoming the "prayer bride," George Herman Lawson, evangelist and self-styled exponent of "right living," told the Boston American today that he intends to marry Mrs. Mary Mason, his original "prayer bride," but hopes to be able to help many lovesick persons during his stay in Boston.

Lawson, who is pastor of the People's Evangelical Church of East Orange, N. J., is conducting a series of revival meetings at No. 724 Washington street, South End. Tonight he promises to open an attack on "hootch vendors" and crooked politicians.

"My motto is," said Lawson, "'Let there be plenty of sunshine but no moonshine.' I came to Boston, not to enter into controversies but to teach the doctrine of Christ, to knock nobody but old Satan. I have with me a big wagon-tongue baseball bat which I shall administer to his coco on every available occasion. If I find a man who represents the devil I will wack him one or two at the same time."

Among the score or more of letters received by Lawson today from women who are willing to take the place of Mrs. Mary Mason as his "prayer bride" is the following:

"Dr. George H. Lawson:

"My Dear Sir: I am a young widow with one boy two years old, and have just obtained my freedom through the courts. I am highly educated and am looking for a good home. I have had to battle through the world and would appreciate a good home, especially with a minister. I am twenty-eight years of age, am considered good looking, have blue eyes, light hair, weigh about 140 pounds.

"If you care to get acquainted with me please write, as I would like to become an aspirant as mine. That seven-room apartment which Mrs. Mary Mason deserted.

MRS FLORA MAT ——,
"No. 5 —— place."

HEAVEN-SENT MATE.

Another letter came from a woman who seemed more interested in Lawson than in his seven-room home:

"Rev. George Herman Lawson.

Respected Sir: I heard you speak last night in the hall at No. 724 Washington street and left your meeting an entirely changed person. I cannot believe that Mrs. Mason is the proper person for you. If she faltered once, would she not do so again? How I would like to share your work with you. I have a comfortable income, good looks and health. I would gladly devote all of these to your work and become your 'prayer bride' if you would but give me the opportunity. I feel sure that we would have a fine understanding of one another. You preach right living and love. That is what the world needs today. If you do not consider all the letters you receive as coming from silly girls please answer this one and grant me an interview. Something tells me that you are my heaven-sent mate.

"GRACE —— (Miss).
"Cambridge, Mass."

OPERATION ON TREAS. CURLEY IS SUCCESS

The operation on City Treasurer John J. Curley for gall stones was pronounced successful by doctors at City Hospital today. Dr. David B. Scannell, assisted by the Curley family physician, Dr. Martin J. English, performed the operation yesterday. Mr. Curley will be in the hospital two weeks, during which time Edward Wall will be acting city treasurer. Mayor James Curley stayed at his brother's bedside until the patient was pronounced out of danger.

WOULD RATHER ACCEPT LEAGUE

Californian Declares Proposal for New World Parley Would Embroil United States

Washington Dec. 29.—A vote before night on the Borah proposal for a world economic conference which is opposed by the administration, was sought by Senate leaders today as Senator Johnson, Republican, California, opened the third day's debate with a broadside against the project.

The Republican managers regretted quietly for a roll call before adjournment and a recess over New Years Day.

Senator Johnson, who fought shoulder to shoulder with Senator Borah against the League of Nations declared the conference proposal worse than the league.

WARNS OF ALLIANCES.

"I am against it," said Senator Johnson, "for precisely the reasons I was against taking the United States into the League of Nations. I am against it because, in my opinion, it will do exactly what, thus far, we have declined to do. I am against it because in even greater degree, and with less safeguards than the League of Nations save to us, it will embroil us in European controversies and finally make the United States, after 150 years, a part of the European system.

"I am against the amendment; as it is presented, and, just as in the former contest of which it is in my judgment but a continuation, I am against it with either reservations or amendments. I have been unable to conceive any amendment or reservation, which leaving the design, would avert the possible injurious consequences.

EVEN PREFERS LEAGUE

"I prefer the League of Nations with some rules of procedure, with the members bound by some preliminary agreement to this general omnibus endeavor which has neither limitation nor specifications."

Representation of the United States on the reparations commission, described by Senator Johnson as the "most repulsive element of the Versailles treaty," would follow necessarily from the Borah conference, he contended, and would cause the United States to "embark upon a new foreign policy."

"It may be said," Senator Johnson continued, "that we can have an economic conference, rehabilitate Europe, and have nothing to do with the reparations or reparations commission. What incredible egotism is this?

"Following to its logical conclusion the proposal for this conference, we must choose either the alternative of arousing false hopes and doing incalculable harm, or of entering upon a course that may jeopardize our future.

"The second reason advanced for this conference, is that if we do not intervene, economically, in Europe, we will have to intervene in war there. I deny it. It will be a long, long day before European troubles will entice us to war; and I think we may dismiss the threat of war from this discussion."

MOSES OPPOSES PLAN.

For the United States to attempt to sit in the European arena, Senator Moses of New Hampshire declared, would mean it would have to act as umpire between England and Belgium on one side and France and Italy on the other, in the reparations muddle.

"Our national game," he said, "daily demonstrates the uncomfortable position the umpire occupies.

WOMAN FILES FIRST BILL IN LEGISLATURE

The first legislative act ever proposed by a woman legislator in this State was filed today with the incoming Legislature by Representative-elect Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald of Boston.

Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald

It is a resolution asking Congress to call a national constitutional convention to consider a general revision of the national constitution.

Mrs. FitzGerald presented the bill at the request of Attorney Joseph J. Leonard of Boston, member of the recent Constitutional Convention and active leader in the fight for the Initiative and Referendum.

Mrs. FitzGerald will advocate the bill before committees and from the floor of the House.

Mr. Leonard says the last national constitutional convention held in this country was the original convention of 1787, which adopted the national constitution. Since then all amendments have been adopted piecemeal by Congress.

He says there are 100 pending amendments and asserts that a convention, free from blocs and party prejudices, could pass on them.

MORE WORK FOR 100 EX-SOLDIERS

One hundred ex-service men who are employed as laborers by the city in the construction of the East Boston tunnel loop station at Maverick square were given a New Year's present today by Mayor Curley. The Mayor extended the time for the work three months, which means steady employment for the veterans through the Winter months.

Advice to Lovelorn

By LAWSON.

Pray for a wife or a husband as you would for a loaf of bread or a pair of boots.

* * *

If love interferes with your business, give up your business.

* * *

Don't marry a man because he has a good suit of clothes. He may have no socks or suspenders on.

* * *

A well-dressed man or woman may be likened unto the cinnamon tree—the bark is of more value than the body.

* * *

Never marry a man to reform him. If he's a hootch hound before marriage he will be a gutter-snipe afterwards.

* * *

Avoid affinities, trial marriages or lengthy engagements as you would a rattle snake. They are the emissaries of hell and the germs of the sink holes of iniquity.

* * *

If you pray for a mate God will send you one, as He sends mates to the birds of the air, the animals of the forests and the fishes of the sea; but pray with faith, for, as He says in His divine doctrines: "No good thing will I withhold from he who walks uprightly." A husband or a wife is a good thing.

EXILED SULTAN GOING TO MECCA NEXT WEEK

Malta, Dec. 29. (By the Associated Press)—Former Sultan Mohammed VI. of Turkey, it is understood, will leave for Mecca next Monday aboard a British warship. He will presumably be landed at Jeddah, the port of Mecca on the Red Sea.

Shortly after the flight of Mohammed VI. from Constantinople, on November 17, to escape threatened trial by the Turkish Nationalists, dispatches from Cairo announced the King of the Hedjaz had invited him to take sanctuary in Mecca, where he was promised welcome and treatment in keeping with his rank.

BOOTLEGGERS SMUGGLE IN $10,000,000 IN BOOZE

Washington, Dec. 29.—Liquor smugglers imported at least 100,000 cases of whiskey, worth $10,000,000 at bootleg prices, into the United States in the week just before Christmas, according to government investigators.

Prohibition officials admitted fleets of ships operated by smugglers have made safe landings because the prohibition navy vessels are confined to within the three-mile limit for purposes of seizure. Much of the liquor has been smuggled through the Canadian border.

Enforcement officers in Maine report that on several days last week smugglers brought in as high as 6,000 cases a day.

CHURCH OUSTS KU KLUX KLAN LECTURER

New York, Dec. 28.—Announcement that the Rev. Oscar Haywood, national lecturer of the Ku Klux Klan, has been ousted as evangelist of Calvary Baptist Church, was made by the pastor, the Rev. John Roach Straton. This action was taken without a dissenting vote at the monthly business meeting of the church, following the unanimous recommendation of the board of directors.

Rev. Haywood

The expulsion resulted from a controversy between Haywood and Dr. Straton following the discovery that Haywood was engaged in klan propaganda work here, and the publication of charges, denied by Dr. Straton, that klan recruiting work had been conducted among the church membership.

Dr. Haywood, who came to New York city ostensibly to disseminate klan propaganda generally, but probably in an attempt to gain recruits for the klan among Protestant clergymen, returned to his home in Mt. Gilead, N. C., about December 1. So far as could be learned, he met with little success in his efforts to gain clerical recruits here.

During his stay here Haywood frequently boasted that he could not be ousted from his position as Calvary Church evangelist, a place created when the Collegiate Baptist Church, of which Haywood was then pastor, merged with Calvary, about five years ago.

ARLINGTON FIREMEN HAVE A TOUGH RUN

The Arlington fire department was given a tough run in the midst of the storm today to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer A. Johnson, No. 63 Pleasant street. Fire, said to have been caused by a defective chimney, started near the kitchen and worked its way up to the second floor.

The firemen found considerable difficulty in reaching the scene, but they were in time to prevent the fire getting a real start. Damage was about $500.

American Scientist Leaves $500,000 to His Fiancee

London, Dec. 29 (By International News Service).—John Sanford Saltus, New York scientist, who died in London from accidental poisoning last June, bequeathed $500,000 to his betrothed, Mrs. Estelle Eugene Campbell, it was revealed today when the will was made public. Saltus left $165,000 to various American charities. During the latter part of his life Saltus spent most of his time in London and Paris.

W. J. LEMP KILLS HIMSELF

St. Louis, Dec. 29.—William J. Lemp, former brewer, today was found shot to death in his office here. A revolver was found nearby.

Police expressed the belief he had committed suicide.

His father and a sister also took their own lives.

The William J. Lemp Brewing Company just before the advent of prohibition was one of the largest brewing companies in the world. It covered a fourteen acre tract in the southern section of the city and was valued at $7,000,000. It was sold at auction last June to five different interests for a total of $585,000. Lemp had been downcast, as he had hoped to get a much larger price for the property.

SERGT. DAN VALLON, 6 FEET 4 INCHES, DEAD

Daniel Vallon of No. 9 Davis street died today at the United States Veterans' Hospital at New Haven, Ct. Vallon was a sergeant of marines during the World War and served with distinction at the Marne, Chateau Thierry and other notable battles. He was gassed twice.

SURPLUS ALCOHOL TO GO INTO MOTOR FUEL

Washington, Dec. 29.—Discovery of an outlet for the millions of gallons of alcohol produced as a by-product in many factories was seen today in the approval by the treasury of a special formula for denatured alcohol. Under the decision, the sale of alcohol for use in the manufacture of motor fuels will be permitted when to every 100 gallons of ethyl alcohol there is added one gallon of gasoline of the quality specified.

GIRL BEGS TO DIE AS POLICE SEEK SUITOR

"I want to die! I want to die!"

Twisting and turning on her bed in City Hospital, Eleanor Joseph, of Roxbury, thus echo as police search the city for the man held responsible for her plight.

The condition of the girl is critical, according to hospital doctors. They have tried to comfort her, but to no avail.

Inspector James A. Dennessy of headquarters secured a statement from the girl soon after she was taken to the hospital, from a city lodging house, but the nature of the statement is being withheld. It is said that the girl implicated a woman doctor and the man being sought.

Friendless, and in despair, the girl is not even trying to win her fight for life, according to the doctors, and this fact is balking their efforts to save her.

CORINNA HIGGINSON TO WED CHICAGO MAN

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Higginson of No. 374 Beacon street today announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Corinna S. Higginson, to Bernard F. Rogers, Jr., of Chicago.

Miss Corinna Higginson

Miss Higginson is widely known among the younger set of the Back Bay. During the war she worked on the Liberty loan campaigns, most of her work being confined to publicity work. She is a member of the 1917-1918 Sewing Circle.

Mr. Rogers served during the war with the American Ambulance Service, seeing service on the Italian front. He is a graduate of the Yale Sheffield Scientific School.

HANDLING OF ALIENS IMPRESSES GEDDES

Washington, Dec. 29.—Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador, is "quite impressed" with the efforts being made by American immigration authorities in handling aliens at Ellis Island, Secretary of Labor Davis stated today, upon his return from an inspection of the New York immigration station. The visit of the British Ambassador and the Secretary of Labor to New York was preliminary to the drawing up of plans for rebuilding Ellis Island.

Meyer Heads Board

Washington, Dec. 29.—Balthesar H. Meyer of Wisconsin today was selected chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission for a term of one year. Meyer is senior member of the commission. He succeeds Charles McChord of Kentucky.

PLANNING BOARD APPROVES CURLEY'S STREET WIDENING PLAN

SUGGESTS FURTHER CHANGES

Needed Improvements in West and South Ends Are Pointed Out

The City Planning Board today notified Mayor Curley that it were in hearty accord with the provisions of his legislative program involving the $13,950,000 street widening plans.

The board, however, made several suggestions, which the mayor stated that he will accept. They are:

The taking over of the triangular block at the corner of Hanover and Washington streets, to make the proper extension of Portland street, so as to enable a further large outlet for traffic.

To extend Causeway street, from Merrimac to Cambridge street at Blossom street, making the extension 60 feet wide.

Summer street extension 100 feet wide instead of 70 feet as first suggested.

The statement from Frederic H. Fay, chairman of the board, is in part as follows:

"The board is glad to note the provision for a new street from the corner of Tremont and Eliot streets to Washington street at a point at or near Beach street.

"This is, in effect, the second step in the proposed western artery, and the only regret the board has in the matter is that it is not carried to Phillip square at least, thus linking up the street system on the east side of Washington street.

"In connection with the Cambridge and Court streets widening the board would urge upon your honor the necessity for the extension of Causeway street from Merrimac street to Cambridge street at Blossom street. The construction of a sixty-foot street across this district would afford a much-needed opportunity for traffic in the vicinity of the North Station, to secure convenient and adequate outlet through Cambridge street to points west of Boston.

"In this connection also, the board understands that your honor has already given favorable consideration to the widening of Cambridge and Court street to 100 feet instead of 80 feet. This the board heartily approves.

"With regard to Summer street, including bridge across the Reserve Channel from the Army Base to the Strandway, the board feels that this should be at least 80 feet, and preferably 100 feet, instead of 70 feet as specified in the draft of the legislative bill."

PETERS BEFORE GRAND JURY

It was shown that the original amount asked was from $50,000 to $75,000, but that a settlement was made for $10,000 on November 16, 1916.

John H. Casey of the First National Bank was also called in connection with the Peters case. Wilbur G. Stone of the National Shawmut Bank appeared today as a witness in the Meyer Berman $50,000 extortion case and Attorney William Shaw McCall testified in the Dorothy Cote case.

It is thought that a new case will be started today. The jury may sit tomorrow.

HUGHES CASE AGAIN.

Mrs. Charlotte Broad Hughes of No. 305 West Ninety-first street, New York, also appeared as a witness today. The connection of Mrs. Hughes, who was at one time a telephone operator at the Quincy House, involves a suit by her against Samuel Waxman of Boston for breach of promise.

At the time of the Pelletier trial the Attorney-General claimed Mrs. Hughes attempted to get money from Waxman because of her alleged relations with him. Subsequently she wrote a letter absolving Waxman. The Supreme Court failed to find Pelletier guilty in the Hughes case. New evidence is thought to have been obtained.

Mrs. Hughes was served with a subpoena by Inspector John Mitchell, who had to obtain entrance to her apartment by means of the roof.

Names of Jurors Drawn by Brickley

For the third time during his present administration Mayor Curley personally conducted the drawing of jurors for Attorney General Allen's special grand jury. At a special meeting of the council held today for that purpose David J. Brickley, president of the board, handed over the chair to the Mayor, who in turn designated Brickley to draw the names from the jury box.

ARREST POSTAL CLERK IN GIRL'S MURDER

New York, Dec. 29.—While funeral services were held today for Theresa McCarthy, ten-year-old, who was found dead with a bullet wound in her heart at her home in Brooklyn, Tuesday, Benjamin Prenderville, a postal clerk and boarder in the McCarthy home, was arrested and formally charged with the murder.

He was with Mrs. McCarthy when the little girl's body was found and told the police he became frightened when he saw the girl's dead body and threw away that revolver and two others he owned of larger calibre. Police say Prenderville has a police record.

The murder of Theresa today served to reunite the parents of the slain child, who have been separated for nine years. They attended the child's funeral together, which was held after a requiem mass at St. Cecilia's Roman Catholic Church.

FIANCEE TELLS WHY SHE FLED

"There is no mystery about my reason for leaving home," said Miss Bauer. "I left because my parents were trying to make me marry a man I did not want. When I marry I want to pick my own man. That is all there is to it.

PARENTS URGED MATCH.

"It was a year ago last June that my sister-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Bauer of No. 147 L street, South Boston, introduced me to Fred J. Palmer. He is a New Yorker and a cousin of my sister-in-law. She told me at the time that he would make me a good husband.

"My parents joined in with her and they all made up their minds I should marry him. He seemed to agree.

"I couldn't see it at all. Then, last Summer, my father sent me to New York to visit him and his mother. Father told me I would probably grow to like him there. I didn't. He asked me to marry him, but I told him I would have to think it over.

DOES NOT LOVE PALMER.

"About three weeks ago he wrote me telling me that he was coming up to Boston for New Year's. He told me he wanted me to get the marriage license and that we should marry and I go back with him.

"My mother and father insisted that I should do it. They made life miserable for me. My father was abusive to me, and I finally agreed. I would have agreed to anything to get out from under my father's roof.

"I got to thinking it over and last Sunday decided I would not go through with the marriage. I do not love Palmer, and never will. I would only be unhappy. So I left my home Sunday. I went to a Back Bay house, where I had a woman friend, and have stopped there since. I had Christmas dinner with Mrs. Johanna Sullivan of Castle street.

"I have written a letter to Palmer explaining all to him. It is over. I shall never marry him and I shall never go back home. I am through with home. But I want every one of my friends to know that Thomas Linehan and Doris Linehan had nothing to do with my leaving.

"Neither did Mrs. Bertha Farmer of Newland street. I left because I do not want a hand-picked husband. I want to pick my own when I am ready to marry."

DOCTOR WARNS AGAINST COUE TREATMENT

New York, Dec. 29 (By International News Service).—Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, president of the Life Extension Institute, today issued a second appeal to the American medical profession warning them against being so apathetic about Emile Coue, the noted French exponent of autosuggestion in the treatment of ailments, now enroute to the United States.

Unless the medical profession awakes to the realization of the harm contained in the acceptance by laymen of Coue's teachings," said Dr. Fisk, "his visit here will likely be followed by an hysterical acceptance of auto-suggestion, which will work harm to the public.

"There is such a thing as the power of suggestion, but Coue's claims for his methods are greatly exaggerated. Some of his assertions are absurd.

"Persons who have chronic troubles are likely to flock to him and forget the teachings of medical science developed after years of search and investigation. They will work themselves much harm.

"Auto-suggestion is but a new phase of mind cure, comparable to Christian Science."

URGE TOWNS TO PLANT PUBLIC FORESTS

That every city and town in the country should establish town forests like the great public forests in the progressive countries of Europe which provide wealth and recreation and which stand in the gap against the depletion of the much needed timber supply, was declared by Ralph S. Hosmer, professor of forestry at Cornell University, to the New England Forestry Congress at the State House today.

"Our waste and other unproductive land ought to be utilized," he said. "They can be made to produce revenue, protect the local water supply and provide recreation for the people in public parks. In many Swiss towns the profit from the town forests is used to reduce taxation and to support other public enterprises.

"Our wood-using mills need more timber. When it is not obtainable the mills must shut down. Our supply of timber here is rapidly diminishing. The consumer pays for the long haul of timber across the continent.

WHIST GAMES LEAD STRAIGHT TO COURT

For running weekly whist parties at which cash prizes were awarded, in Laster Hall, on Andrew street, Lynn, Fred H. Canney of No. 107 Williams avenue, Lynn, was fined $40 today.

Jessie M. Canney, his wife, was freed. Both were charged with conducting a gambling house, and Judge Reeve said that, while he considered Canney innocent of intentional wrong-doing, he found it necessary to impose a fine.

DECLARE TRUCE IN CONSULATE QUARREL

New York, Dec. 29.—An armistice has been signed in the siege of the Irish consulate, carried on for two days between the forces of the Free State and the Republic.

Reporters who called at the building where the consulate is located between midnight and dawn today found the outer entrance locked.

Late last night, Lindsay Crawford, newly appointed Consul-General of the Irish Free State in New York city, was holding his inner office grimly, after a visit beginning Wednesday night and all day yesterday.

In the outer office Robert Briscow, an officer of the Irish Republican army; Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, widow of the former Lord Mayor of Cork, and half a dozen other representatives of the republic, were on watch. Strolling in and out of the offices were uniformed policemen under command of Detective Gegan of the Bomb squad.

Both sides had announced that they were there to stay. The police then had made it known that any violence or disturbance would bring swift action.

HAYS WARNS OF PREJUDICE

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 29.—The spirit of America must not tolerate an arraying of class against class, sectional animosity or religious prejudice, Will H. Hays, director general of the motion picture industry, declared at a banquet of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity convention here.

"Guard against this as you would guard against a pestilence," he admonished. "The country has no greater enemy than one who would thus divide the country against itself. Mere agitation and mere motion are not progress. The vicious circle is not the straightest distance between honest effort and highest reward. Remember that one man is better than another only when he behaves himself better.

"Give every well behaved man his equality, and require from him full share of accountability."

FIRE RUINS BLOCK IN NEWBURYPORT

Newburyport, Dec. 29.—Women and children were driven into the blizzard in night clothing at 4:10 a. m. today by a fire that destroyed a block of stores and tenements and threatened the entire business section. The loss was $50,000.

The fire was discovered by Harry Bouchikos, residing in one of the tenements at Nos. 39, 40 and 41 Market square. Bouchikos dashed across the street in his night attire and turned in an alarm. The women and children were taken to the Central fire station and cared for during the rest of the night.

Firemen found difficulty in fighting the flames. Many lines of hose froze. The lumber yard of Hatch Brothers, in rear of the block, caught fire, but the blaze was halted by the firemen.

KATO DENOUNCED BY JAP COUNCIL

Tokio, Dec. 29 (By the Associated Press).—The Kato government's policy in its dealings with China were condemned today in a resolution adopted by the privy council, and addressed to the Prince Regent. Such action is unprecedented in the history of Japanese politics.

The privy council's resolution will be presented to Crown Prince Mirohito, the Regent, with whom final decision rests.

Ordinarily such a resolution would mean the immediate resignation of the ministry, but under present disturbed conditions in China, and with the New Year's holiday's imminent, the Cabinet, which meets Saturday, may decide to present to the Prince a counter resolution explaining its policy and await his decision before taking action.

MAN WHO GAVE AWAY BUSINESS TELLS LABOR TROUBLE CURE

'TREAT EMPLOYES FAIRLY; APPLY GOLDEN RULE'

New York, Dec. 29 (By International News Service).—The factory run by and for its employes functioned smoothly the first day. It was the plant formerly owned by Henry A. Dix, millionaire employer of New York and Millville, N. J., who announced that he would turn his $1,000,000 a year dress manufacturing business over to the workers as a reward for their faithful service and who put the announcement in effect yesterday.

He reduced his own salary at the same time from $60,000 to 50 cents annually. He also loaned the employes $250,000 cash capital with which to carry on the business. They are to pay for the blocks of stock they receive out of the future profits of the business.

"The solution of the labor problems in the United States is not entirely, perhaps, but very largely, in the hands of employers," Mr. Dix said today, "and the solution, as I see it, is this: Treat your employes fairly; remember they are just human beings like yourself, and that without them your business success would be impossible.

VERY SIMPLE MATTER.

"It is all simple enough when you come to look at it. It is nothing much more than the practical application of the Golden Rule.

"And with it, in my case, go the love and thoughtfulness for the well being and aid of others as they came from the soul of a woman—my wife, who died three years ago. For it was she who guided and advised me in whatever I have been able to do for the welfare of others.

"The trouble with employers today is they give too much thought to the profits they hope to make and not enough to the welfare of the people who have made their success possible.

"It has been my experience that if employes are treated fairly, if their rights are given consideration they will do the fair thing by you in return.

NEVER HAD A STRIKE.

"I have never had a strike among the many people I have employed because they all knew I did not regard them merely as beasts of burden, but men and women who have feelings just as I have who are part of our common humanity.

"Other business men throughout the country may not follow our example, but it has been demonstrated to our satisfaction it is the right course. We have shown the way to others. If they follow there will be less labor unrest and dissatisfaction in this country."

SCIENTISTS IN SESSION at Cambridge, Mass., tell you that the civilization of Greece and Rome was destroyed by mosquitoes planting fever in the blood. That the human race was not wiped out is the miracle, with sewers running through open gutters in the middle ages, and with absolutely no knowledge of fighting disease.

Scientists even yet have many things to learn. For instance, while consumption is on the decline, deaths from cancer have increased 33 per cent. in twenty years.

However, even cancer will be conquered in time. Whatever man can think of and try, he can do.

NUNGESSER, GREATEST of all French fliers, says something that ought to interest Henry Ford: "Some one will make a two-seated airplane, inexpensive, not noisy, starting from land or water, all parts standardized."

TECH FRESHMAN DENIES PLAN TO ELOPE

Earl D. Lissner, twenty-year-old Tech freshman, and Miss Alice Sanders, seventeen years old, freshman at the Emerson College of Oratory, tripped down to City Hall and took out marriage intentions.

Young Lissner and his sweetheart both strenuously deny that they intend to elope, but at the same time, friends of the girl, whose home is in Irvington, Ill., feel that somehow an elopement is in the air.

"It was just an experiment," Young Lissner, who lives at the Y. M. C. A. on Huntington avenue, Back Bay, said. "We just went to City Hall to learn the ropes. My people do not want me to marry for at least a year, so we will just let the intentions lapse."

Miss Alice Teague, house president of the Emerson College dormitory on Commonwealth avenue, where Miss Sanders lives, said she would telegraph the girl's father at once.

"It must be stopped," she said. "I am very worried, as they have frequently talked of eloping."

General Rangalos, chief of staff of the Greek forces in Thrace, has departed for Salonika. The new war scare has arisen from the deadlock at Lausanne.

Great Britain has massed a great fleet in the Turkish Straits. Although diplomatic relations between Greece and Great Britain were broken off both nations would make common cause against the Turks.

INDICT KERN AND GUFFEY IN BOSCH CASE

New York, Dec. 29.—As a result of the expose by the Hearst newspapers of the transactions by which Martin E. Kern, a former convict and alleged German alien acquired the vast properties of the Bosch Magneto Company from the alien property custodian, the Federal Grand Jury has returned two indictments.

The first charges Kern with claiming American citizenship in an application for a passport while he was still an alien. The penalty for this is a fine of $2,000, or five years in prison, or both. There are two counts in the indictment.

The second indictment charges Joseph F. Guffey, director of sales for the alien property custodian under A. Mitchell Palmer and Francis P. Garvan, with the embezzlement of $406,001, acquired by him from property seized from the Germans during the war. The instrument contains twelve counts.

It fails to specify what seized German property was sold by Guffey or just how the alleged embezzlements aggregating more than $400,000 took place.

WOULD DEPORT 70,000 RADICALS

New York, Dec. 29.—Registration of aliens in the United States would disclose about 70,000 of them as undesirable and liable to deportation, according to James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, who spoke at a luncheon of the Advertising Club here.

"In America," said Secretary Davis, "there isn't room for the revolutionist. We are all revolutionists. The man who comes here preaching discontent, hate, envy and revolution should be shipped out. The sooner we take him to Ellis Island and return whence he came, the better it will be for him and for this country.

"Every alien should be registered, and I would have each one pay a small fee, about $5 or $10, spread over a period of about five years, so that there would be a fund from which the alien could be taught what this country means and American ideals represent."

1923 PROSPERITY SEEN BY HOOVER

Washington, Dec. 29 (By International News Service)—Business and industry in the United States, approaching the beginning of the new year can regard the progress of the past months with satisfaction and may look forward to continued prosperity during the early part of 1923, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, declared today.

He pointed out, however, that "unsettled conditions in foreign countries, particularly in Europe, are still depressing trade, and to a certain extent have kept the prices of agricultural products below the level of other commodities."

FRYE GUILTY IN DRUG CASE; RUTH FREED

Portland, Me., Dec. 29.—Ralph A. Frye, former Federal narcotic inspector, was found guilty of conspiracy to extort bribes by a jury in the United States District Court here.

Dr. Edwin C. Ruth, his superior, who stood trial with him on the same charge, was found not guilty. Frye was not sentenced.

Attorney William R. Pattangall, chief counsel for the accused former officials, appealed the finding on exceptions filed during the trial. The case now goes to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for further hearing.

Judge John A. Peters allowed Frye to go free on a cash bail of $1,500, the amount under which he had been held during the trial.

The jury arrived at the verdicts after a deliberation of less than four hours. Neither of the findings was a surprise to the hundreds of spectators who have filled the courthouse daily.

Frye's counsel have thirty days in which to file a brief on the exceptions. The case then rests in the hands of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and even if that court sustains the verdict it may be six months or more before the former officer knows his fate.

He threatened to kill anyone who attempted to interfere with the one man party he was staging, and it was not until Lieutenant Terence F. Flanagan and Policeman Louis J. Fournier burst in the door that he was subdued and placed under arrest.

According to Chief of Police Edmond H. Gingras, Young appropriated $22 that had been sent to Joseph Burns, another boarder in the house.

NOT NOW OR EVER, SAYS MRS. McCORMICK

Chicago, Dec. 29.—"Not now—or ever."

Thus Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick today shattered expectation that the world's richest woman would wed Edward Krenn, 26-year-old Swiss architect.

The vehement denial of her impending marriage to Krenn was delivered on the eve of the expiration of the legal ban on her remarriage in Illinois.

Mrs. McCormick's divorce from Harold F. McCormick, harvester magnate and now the bridegroom of Ganna Walska, the Polish opera singer, was granted a year ago today. The decree's formal entry was made the next day.

Whether the visit of Fowler McCormick, her son, and Muriel, her daughter, to Judge Charles S. Cutting, her attorney, had anything to with quashing up this technicality, whether it was a last-minute effort on the part of the two children to seek their mother's legal counsel's aid in dissuading her from buying the youthful Swiss, neither the McCormick children nor Mr. Cutting would say.

"not now—or ever" was somewhat modified by Mrs. McCormick hastily adding, "Whom I marry is no one's business but my own' her friends point out. They point in the belief that the McCormick-Krenn nuptials soon will take place.

Krenn and Mrs. McCormick became acquainted through their attendance of the classes in psychology in Switzerland. Since coming to Africa they have been almost inseparable companions.

Fashions of 1923 to Give Figure More Fullness

Paris, Dec. 29.—Nineteen twenty-three will bring a little larger skirt for women. Straight tunics will be worn only by young girls. Women will tire of the loose dresses and will pick models with more form than the clothes that have been shown during the past year.

The line will be the question. The problem is to give the figure more fullness without changing the youthful and agreeable silhouette of the last year's.

The most fashionable fabrics of 1923 will be printed tissues, crepe de chine, mousseline, crepe georgette and satins in all colors.

$2,500 JEWEL THEFT IN ROXBURY HOME

During the absence of the family the apartment of Dr. William V. Martin at No. 384 Riverway, Roxbury, was entered by thieves and jewelry valued at $2,500 stolen. Dr. Martin said that the front door had been forced open. The thieves obtained a diamond ring valued at $1,700 and several other rings and watches.

DALLINGER TO HOLD CADETSHIP EXAMS

Congressman Dallinger will hold examinations for principals and alternates for appointment to the Military Academy at West Point and the Naval Academy at Annapolis, under the auspices of the United States Civil Service Commission Custom House Tower, Boston, Saturday, January 13.

MILLS GIRL TO INVOKE AID OF SPIRITS

New Brunswick N. J., Dec. 23.—The Halls-Mills murder mystery, one of the strangest crimes in the annals of American history, remains unsolved and hids fair, according to the best authorities today, to go on down the corridor of time unsolved.

The widow of the slain minister, Mrs. Frances Noel Stevens Hall—has grown grayer. Her austerity, long a characteristic, seems to have swallowed her. She has not even warmed to the holiday festivities at her dead husband's church. Neighbors and servants say she is packing her trunks for a European tour, going first to Italy.

Charlotte Mills, the sixteen-year-old daughter, is studying spiritualism, hoping to get in communication with her slain mother.

Jimmy Mills, wife husband of the choir singer, burdened with household duties, has grown sullen, neighbors say. He is reported to be in favor of wedding a strong woman who does not trifle with ministers' affections. He feeds his two motherless children chiefly from canned goods.

CHELSEA WIFE SAYS HUSBAND PUT HER OUT

Accusations flew wildly about the courtroom when the John Di Passanise of Chelsea and his wife had it out before his honor.

Celia, the wife, declared her husband didn't love her any more, and that he put her and their five-months-old child out of the house.

John, the husband, declared Celia never cooked him a meal that she had left him seven times and that he had never put her out. He was found not guilty of failing to support his wife, and was placed on probation charged with the non-support of the child.

Society Agog Over New Year's Party at Essex Country Club, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

THERE'S so little going on these days along the North Shore that all the members of the year-round colony down there are quite a bit excited about the New Year's party to be held at the Essex County Club in Manchester.

Preceding the dancing, which starts at midnight, several large dinners will be given. Among the hostesses is one of the Shore's younger matrons, tall and dark-haired Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr., who has all the jollity and good-sportsmanship of her Bessie Lee days. Another hostess is Mrs. Russell Burrage, who, like the McKeans, is of the Beverly Farms colony, which is really the centre of the North Shore's Winter colony.

Hamilton is another popular stamping-ground for those hardy and spirit-loving souls who can stand a Winter of the Shore's hearty breezes. Prominent among the year-round colony there are the Albert C. Burrages, Jr., Miss Mary Curtis, whose brilliant red hair and skilled horsemanship are equally well known along the Shore; also that newly-wedded pair, the Tom Rices, the latter formerly Miss Elizabeth Lyman, one of the prettiest girls of her year, and a bride of last June.

The Freddy Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Cole, the Neil Rices, the Randolph Dodges and Colonel and Mrs. Jacob Peabody make up a jolly group of Winter cottagers at Wenham, just next door to Hamilton.

BUT speaking of the Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr.—the one-time Bessie Lee has just been made an aunt. The cause of this happy event is a tiny young person who has just joined the household of Mr. and Mrs. Adams (Margery Lee), having arrived there on Christmas eve. The youthful arrival is a boy.

It was a year ago last October that Arthur Adams took as his bride the widow of Francis Sargent, whose tragic death took place several years ago.

The ceremonial, which was very quiet, was performed at the Beverly Farms home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lee. This year Mr. and Mrs. Adams are making their home in Dover.

Also receiving congratulations, by the way, are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr. (Faith Simpkins), whose addition to the family is also a boy. The Tufts, Jr., who have a small family of several youngsters, have joined the year-round colony at Beverly Farms, I believe. Last Summer it was a familiar sight to see the former Faith Simpkins drive her blue car up to the station to call for her hubby.

MRS. HALLAM MOVIUS (Alice West), who was caught in the accompanying picture in rather a pensive pose, is one of the smart set's most energetic matrons. Her name has been linked with a number of interesting causes during the past few years, and she is known as one of the most indefatigable charity workers hereabouts.

MR. AND MRS. VALENTINE HOLLINGSWORTH of Boston have been spending a few days in New York at the Lorraine.

THE social calendar has been a very barren one for the debutantes in Boston this week, who—with a number of enterprising buds have hied themselves to gay old Gotham to partake of the debutante merry-making there.

Both Frances Weld, daughter of Bernard C. Weld, and Miss Helen Clark went over to New York the other day, accompanied by the latter's mother, Mrs. Edward Andrews Clark. They attended the dinner party which Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stone of New York gave at Pierre's in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Margaret Stone. Others who went over from Boston were Georgs Weld, Russell Robb and Joseph Larocque, Jr. Following the dinner there was a dance, to which additional guests came.

WILSON'S GANG DRIVER IS GUILTY

Abraham Braowitch of Everett, alleged sixteen-year-old member of "Tug" Wilson's gang, was found guilty of receiving stolen goods by a Middlesex Superior Court jury after it had deliberated four and one-half hours. He was found not guilty on an additional charge of larceny. His bail was raised from $5,000 to $10,000, and the youth is in the East Cambridge Jail, unable to furnish it.

Braowitch was arrested with two others, following the robbery of fifty cartons of cigarettes from a Boston & Maine freight car in Everett. He drove the truck.

New York, Dec. 29.—The shadow of a burglar thrown on a curtain in the home of John Stack was seen by Miss Mae Stack, who was calling next door, and nearly led to the intruder's capture. The burglar fled with $2000 while Miss Stack and a woman companion were entering the house.

GENEVA FURIOUS WHEN "BOB" OVERSLEPT ON WEDDING DAY

ALL NIGHT PARTY LEADS TO OPEN RUPTURE

Imagine forgetting a date to be married.
That's just what Bob Savage did.
No wonder Geneva Mitchell, who had yielded to his whirlwind courtship, spurned him when he sent notice to the "Midnight Frolic" stage door. This was a blow to Savage's heart that sent him back to his classes.
He tells today of this period of his romance.

By ROBERT S. ("BOB") SAVAGE.
(Copyright, 1922, by the New York American.)

The day following my rapid-fire proposal to beautiful Geneva Mitchell of the Midnight Frolic and her instant acceptance was Sunday.

As I had retired after the break of day, I did not waken until four o'clock in the afternoon. I looked at my watch in dismay and rushed in my dressing-gown to the telephone.

Calling Geneva, I was relieved to find that she, too, had just wakened and had been on the way to telephone me when I called.

Sunday is a dull day in New York so we planned to spend it in a quiet walk up and down Riverside Drive, where I was living with my brother Ed and his wife.

DOUBTS VANISHED.

As I was leaving the house a half hour later to meet Geneva my sister-in-law asked me where I was going. I told her I was meeting a girl for a stroll on the Drive, and she suggested: "Why don't you bring her home to dinner when you finish your walk?" I had a moment's misgiving about bringing a Frolic girl into my brother's home. But when I thought of Geneva's charming air and "distingue" manner, my doubts vanished.

I could think of no reasonable excuse for refusing this well-meant invitation, and so I agreed to bring Geneva home about 7.

TAKES HER HOME.

When I met my beautiful fiancee that day, her clothes, bearing, manners and appearance suggested the finest that Fifth avenue can produce.

When I told Geneva of my sister's invitation she refused in panic at first. It was not until I reassured her that neither my brother nor his wife had ever been to the Frolic or, for that matter, on Midnight Broadway, as far as I knew, that she was convinced. We decided it would be better to tell my brother nothing of Geneva's occupation, nor of our coming marriage.

"AUNT GENEVA."

Geneva took the whole family by storm. Little Eddie, my brother's seven-year-old boy, whom Ed already has selected as the fullback of the Yale varsity for 1935, was smitten the hardest by Geneva's charms.

With a childish knack for saying the wrong thing in the right place, he immediately began calling her "Aunt Geneva," which made it uncomfortable for me, but furnished amusement for the others.

After dinner Eddie made it a little more difficult by selecting from his hundreds of toys his Pogo-stick with which to amuse his "Aunt Geneva."

Then he pleaded:

"Show me how to run a Pogo-stick, Aunt Geneva. I just got this for a present and I don't know how it works."

By now I had entered into the spirit of the farce and searching through the new Victrola records I selected the song she had made the hit of the town.

And so, to the strains of "Booming Up and Down, Pogoing All Over Town" "Aunt" Geneva demonstrated the proper use of the pogo stick in my brother's apartment. All applauded her skill but none knew where she had gained it.

The day before our contemplated wedding day I bought a ring, but neglected to get a license. I planned to get that the next day.

STAGES BOOZE PARTY.

That night I staged a party at a well known Broadway cafe. All our usual companions were there, and so many others that I cannot remember them all. We occupied half the tables in the cafe.

Geneva was never more beautiful, and although we had told no one the details of our plans to marry, the great diamond on her third finger made it a pretty open secret. She was the most radiant being I have ever seen that night.

As the hour grew later the other patrons of the cafe left one by one until finally our party was left practically in possession of the place. There was no cabaret, so we resolved to supply the deficiency.

GENEVA AS CHAPLIN.

Geneva, whose specialty at the Midnight Frolic was looking beautiful, impersonated Charlie Chaplin, and the verdict of the gang was that she was wasting her time in the musical comedy and belonged in the movies.

The last of the party finally retired not about 8 o'clock the next morning.

It was 9 o'clock before I had taken Geneva home, paid the bills and breakage and rolled into bed.

They say it's only the just that sleep deeply. I surely must have been one of the just that fatal Sixth of January for it was 5:30 in the afternoon before I awoke—on what was to have been my wedding day.

When I realized that I had failed to get the license and that I could not get it that night, I called up Geneva's home with anxiety. She was out, her mother said, and would not be home until after the show.

SPURNED BY GENEVA.

I dashed to the theatre. Greeting the stage door keeper—by that time an old friend—I asked to see Geneva. He replied incongruously that Miss Mitchell had left orders that she was to see no one.

When a suitable bribe was produced he finally consented to take in my card, which was returned with the message that "Miss Mitchell was not at home."

I exhausted every possible means of seeing her. Finally, just before the train left for New Haven, I got her mother on the phone, and was told:

"Geneva says for me to tell you that she doesn't care to see you again. Please don't bother her any more."

And bang! went the receiver in my ear.

(To be continued.)

Have You Seen Him?

MISSING—CONBOY.

Columbus avenue man who has mysteriously vanished. Relatives fear he has met with foul play.

Police are aiding in the search for Thomas J. Conboy, fifty-two years old, of No. 868 Columbus avenue, who vanished Christmas night while returning from a party at the home of friends in Dorchester. He left his friends at Park street, boarded a car for home and has not been seen since.

During ten years of employment at the Tudor press he had never missed a day and had only been late once or twice.

Conboy had a large sum of money on his person and relatives fear he may have been the victim of foul play.

The missing man is a widower. He is five feet eleven inches tall and weighs 180 to 190 pounds. When last seen he wore a brown overcoat, a black sack coat and vest, gray trousers and tan shoes. He has gray hair and moustache. Anybody with information about him should call Main 3572 and ask for Leo, his son.

CIVILIZATION RESTS IN THEIR HANDS

HARMONY'S IMPRESSIONS OF SCIENTISTS AT BIG CONVENTION HERE

'Palm Beach' of Mars Chilly at Night, Scientists Show

The "Palm Beach" of Mars is at the Equator, where Martians enjoy balmy temperatures of from 65 to 77 during the day.

At night they pile on the blankets, for it gets much colder.

Jupiter, on the other hand, is a cold planet, where temperatures hover around 130 below zero.

Saturn, is some thirty-six degrees warmer than Jupiter.

Venus is much warmer than the earth.

Those temperatures have been estimated at the Lowell Observatory in Arizona by instruments so delicate that they could detect the heat of a tallow candle many miles away.

The astounding results obtained by these instruments were described today by Professor Donald N. Menzel of Princeton University at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Cambridge.

HOW THEY PROVE IT.

The chief instrument is a thermo-couple, which is essentially two substances, both electricity conductors, joined together, and attached to a highly sensative device for measuring electrical current. A very slight increase in temperature is enough to set up an electrical current at the point of contact between the two substances, and this current is measured and compared with other data.

The heat from the planet is focused on the instrument by means of a telescope, as heat rays are magnified in the same way as light waves.

An enormous amount of corrections must be made in the figures at first obtained, and computations of astonishing intricacy must be calculated.

WARM INTERNALLY.

The results show that two planets, Jupiter and Saturn, have some internal source of energy of their own. If they were warmed only by the heat of the sun they would be 256 and 240 below zero respectively.

The average income based on reports from 87,000,000 individuals is $1,344, according to Professor Burton H. Camp of Wesleyan University.

Of the 87 million there were 800,000 whose incomes were negative, i. e., who reported a loss for the year. At the other end of the scale 152 received over a million dollars.

The great bulk, thirty-six million, had incomes ranging from nothing to $4,000.

The stammerer has more difficulty with vowels than with consonants, according to Samuel D. Robbins, director of the Boston Stammerers' Institute.

CHECK ON STAMMERERS

Mr. Robbins described investigations made with a device invented by him which measures, in hundredth seconds, in both normal speakers and stammerers, the length of each vowel spoken, each pause between syllables, and the proportional part of each respiration period used in vocalization.

The entire civilization of the world a total collapse, with the descendents of the present generation wandering about in the woods, clad in skins, and reverted to an age of slavery.

The crumbling ruins of great city sky-scrapers and the rusting debris of factories, the only remnants of the civilization of the 20th Century.

All this and worse is in store for the human race unless scientists find in the near future some substitute for our dwindling supplies of coal and other natural resources, according to Dr. Edwin E. Slosson, editor of Science Service.

"It is now a race between chemists and time," he said.

ALL WILL BE LOST.

"If the chemists win the race, by finding some substitute for coal and oil, civilization will be saved. If Time wins and the natural resources of the world are consumed, our wealth, our comforts and luxuries, our science and art, our power and population, will all be lost.

Some of the sources which may save civilization from this doom if they can be adapted by scientists are:

Internal heat of the earth. It may be possible to develop deep borings for steam production, as volcanic heat is even now used in Italy and Hawaii.

Tides. Recent British and Scandinavian projects show considerable power may be obtained by storage in favored localities.

Sun. The heat from the sun has been developed to an efficiency of 4 per cent, and may later mean the utilization of enormous amounts of solar power now wasted in deserts.

Natural electrical sources, such as lightning.

Winds. Sailing vessels may again come into common use and wind motors can be made a valuable auxiliary source of power.

Waves. Through the development of electrical methods of collecting, accumulating and distributing energy, waves may assume a new aspect.

SEEING WHITE WHEN YOU SEE RED

BY THE FLAPPER.
(Caryl Frink).

When you see red you really see white.

This wise crack belongs to Professor G. M. Stratton, who came all the way from the University of California to tell the convening scientists about his latest findings in color psychology. The professor's paper was titled: "Blood, the Color Red, and the Anger of Cattle."

White, and not red, was found to be the color most apt to give the cattle the blues, according to the professor's extensive experiments.

BULLS PARTICULAR.

The man of science went on to explain that if you had endured the humiliating experience of receiving the bum's rush from a riled up bull, you had no right to assume that it was your red bandanna or your red flannel shirt that had caused the beast to lose its poise. It was more apt to be, the professor suggested, simply that the bull didn't like your face.

In fact, it was this line of reasoning, on the part of the speaker that almost turned the dignified meeting of the learned scientists into a whisker-pulling affair.

The chairman, at the close of the paper, made so bold as to suggest that he had once been tossed from a bull's bailiwick for carrying a black umbrella.

CATTLE SENSITIVE.

"Exactly," returned the speaker, with a nice bow of deference to the chairman. "Cattle are very sensitive to strange looking human beings."

The assembled scientists burst out into a very uncultured roar. And the chairman blushed furiously to the top of his polished head.

After a great deal of parliamentary procedure, the professors managed to make it up without throwing inkwells.

One of the interesting points made by Professor Stratton was the reaction of cattle to anything in motion. He appealed to forty-seven cattle men in California for statistics, and of that number thirty-six joined him in flouting the time-honored theory that red angers cattle. But all of them agreed with him that red, or any other color, set in motion before cattle will excite them to a very high pitch.

WAVING GETS GOAT.

Thus the matador, who waves a red scarf in front of a bull to enrage him, would get the same results with a violet scarf or a black one. It's the waving, not the color, that gets the animal's goat.

So, if you want to go out to feed the cow-cows in your red kimono, go ahead.

Only make sure that the cow you pick has been to college. The risk, of course, is in waving a red flag at a bull that quit school before he got to psychology.

RED CARD OR NO WORK IN TEXAS

Brockenridge, Tex., Dec. 29.—I. W. W. organizers announced today that they proposed to combine all oil workers in this section to enable them to contend for higher wages and better living conditions.

The organizers said they intended to make possession of the "red card" a requisite for employment in Texas and Oklahoma oil field camps.

Mayor C. H. Fulwiler has refused a request of I. W. W. to open an organization hall here or to speak on the streets.

$75,000 LOSS IN 4 BITTER FIRE BATTLES

Four Boston, Lynn and Nantasket fires caused $75,000 damage today. Firemen were hampered by the heavy snow storm and bitter wind. The fires:

Washington Theatre building, No. 724 Washington street, four alarms, $50,000 or more.

Nantasket Beach stores, $5,000.

Paragon Park threatened.

South Boston saw-mill, $15,000.

Two-family house, Fayette street, Lynn, $500.

Fire destroyed Thomas Meany's Nantasket restaurant early in the day, damaged five small stores and a bowling alley and sent threatening sparks on roofs of Paragon Park buildings nearby. Hull village apparatus was stalled in the snow, but Wayeland and Green Hill apparatus managed to get through.

While the fire was raging Fireman John Finleson of the Hull fire department fell on the ice and broke an arm and split his lip. He was rushed to a nearby physician's home for treatment.

In the in-town fire in the Washington Theatre building, America Hall, the "church" of Evangelist Lawson of "Prayer Bride" fame, was ruined.

This fire started in an Odd Fellows' lodge room and spread to the roof. Firemen fought from the inside until driven out by flames, then fought with water tower streams.

LON CHANEY IN HIS GREATEST ROLE AS FAGIN

LON CHANEY is not the only one that believes his characterization of Fagin in the Jackie Coogan production of "Oliver Twist" is his greatest achievement. It was because it was expected to be so that this actor was chosen as fitting to support the marvelboy of the screen, Jackie Coogan.

Chaney, a master of make-up and the subtleties of acting, has been called "the Richard Mansfield of the screen." Some of his impersonations have been likened to those of the actor who presented Beau Brummel, Baron Chevral and other great character parts. But in the role of Fagin, Chaney sought to make good on his greatest opportunity, and he did.

The make-up of Chaney, as the conscienceless "merry old gentleman" whose business it was to ruin the souls of youth and commit them to a life of crime, is matchless in its perfection. Its fidelity to the descriptions by Charles Dickens of Fagin, is perfect. But not only in its physical resemblance to the villain is Chaney's perfected art apparent.

Jackie Coogan, star of the massive production, with this extraordinary cast, headed by Lon Chaney, Gladys Brockwell, Georgs Siegmann and Lionel Belmore is seen at Tremont Temple for the last week, beginning New Year's Day.

MORGAN AT THE CRANK.

IRA H. MORGAN, who is perhaps better known to the motion picture fraternity as "Joe Morgan," after the famous character in "Ten Nights in a Barroom," is turning the crank on Marion Davies' next super-production, "Little Old New York," which is now being made at the Cosmopolitan Corporation's studio, at 127th street and 2nd avenue.

This is Morgan's third year with Cosmopolitan and his sixth Marion Davies' production. During the three years, Morgan turned the crank on "The Bride's Play," "Enchantment," "Beauty's Worth," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," a part of "Adam and Eve" and "Little Old New York." He was interrupted in his work on "Adam and Eve" to accompany Cosmopolitan's company to Europe for exteriors on "The Enemies of Women," during which time Miss Davies was resting. With the starting of work on "Little Old New York," however, Morgan was placed on that production.

SAVE 3 MEN BURIED IN SPRINGFIELD DRIFTS

Springfield, Dec. 29.—Three men suffering from alcoholism, were saved from death in the blizzard today by police officers, who found them nearly buried in snow drifts. All three were in critical condition and almost unconscious from exposure and the drink.

The high winds piled up the snow on streets, car tracks and railroad tracks, bringing all traffic practically to a standstill. Service on many of the suburban car lines was suspended entirely, while plows battled valiantly against the storm.

Several street cars were reported abandoned in the drifts by their crews, and the passengers were obliged to fight their way to their destinations, afoot.

Representative Hourihan Files Drastic Bill to Prevent "Conspiracies"

Another bill to sharpen the ugly points of the "eternal triangle" was filed with the incoming Legislature today.

Following [illegible] on the heels of the Hays "No Heart Balm" bill Representative [illegible] Michael F. Hourihan of Boston has asked the new Legislature to prevent man or woman who has been divorced from marrying within four years of the day when the divorce decree becomes absolute.

And Miss Ruth De Vitt, of No. 6 Willoughby place, Roxbury:

"Men think they are pretty wise. It's about time that they found they aren't. If they didn't think we could collect damages for our broken hearts, there would be a million and one King Solomons having as many sweethearts to whom they would propose marriage as there are—well I don't know, but you can imagine, I'll say."

And Miss Ivy Ceurvels, of No. 10 Wollaston terrace, Dorchester:

"I say the same as the other girls do. But let me say this. If Mr. Hays' bill is passed there will be more bachelors and old maids than there have been in the bygone

Interrupted by cries of "Sit down," "Throw him out!" and "Fake," Cuddy accused the ministers of Los Angeles of meddling in affairs outside their province when they condemned Will H. Hays, chief of the film industry, for his action in removing the ban on Arbuckle.

More Arrests Due in Mer Rouge Case

Monroe, La., Dec. 29.—Sheriff Carpenter of Morehouse Parish today declared there would be new arrests in the Morehouse kidnaping investigations upon the return of the Federal investigators who were in New Orleans yesterday attending a conference with State officials.

CALZA FAILS TO TOSS KOTSONAROS AFTER HE THREW NOORY

HOUR LIMIT ON BOUT DEFEATS ITALIAN

George Calza the great Italian heavyweight wrestler, received his first setback since coming to the Hub, when he failed to topple two opponents in an hour. The Italian had agreed to pass Lovey Kotsonaros and Achmed Noory, Turkish champion, who made his debut on a Boston mat.

Calza asked that his first opponent be Noory. Noory gave him one of the sweetest contests the South has had in quite a few days. Calza, time after time, secured treacherous holds on the Turk but Achmed was a wee bit too clever to be pinned to the mat in a hurry. Not until the grapplers had battled on high for twenty-one minutes was George able to perform the first part of the much-talked-of trick.

Noory was conquered when the Italian tipped the Turk off his feet and turned him over, putting his shoulders to the mat with an upright crotch hold.

Kotsonaros and Calza in the other bout work I with more and brawn without a fa being credited to either and b za decided to topple both, he to he's boys the mat.

Never before in the history of the Grand Opera House was there such a gathering to see a wrestling carnival. With one of the worst blizzards in many days on record, hundred or more fans who stood in line were turned away while the lucky ones who had seats and were left the theatre satisfied and happy at the main bout.

In the semi-final bout Stanley Krasak disposed of the "Masked Man in very short order, dropping him with an inside crotch and body lift.

Fireworks were plenty in the opening bout when Joe Parelli the Wyoman, wrestling coach of Boston Rob Johnson. This was a duel to the finger nail biting type and won the first fall in the first bout in six minutes and a half, by a body and a headlock after which Johnson won a headlock and arm hold.

Perelli, won the second fall with a flying mare in 7 minutes and 10 seconds and the third and deciding match was, to the crowd like a flash when he put Rob between his legs whirled him about with a grand swing which sent Johnson to the mat in five minutes and 15 seconds.

Jack Conway, our able expert on picking wrestling holds has an average of picking wrestlers at 1,000 per cent.

CLEAN BILL NOT YET FOR RUBE BENTON

New York, Dec. 21.—In spite of "Garry" Hermann's declaration that Rube Benton should be given a good weed for wiping his charges and not certain ball players. The National League is not yet ready to give the small hunder a clean bill of health, it was learned here today.

B. C. Victor Over McGill Hockey Team

In a fast hockey game Boston College won over McGill University three goals to one. Brilliant team work and the spectacular play of Leo Hughes did it, and Goal tender Jack Fitzgerald defeated the Canadians.

The visitors were able to penetrate the sound defense of the home team but once.

Hughes was the star of the game. His superb stick work and rushing saw him get caught the referee off in a scoring game in defending the goal for the Maroon and Gold.

Hughes was first to score for the local six on a shot from a difficult angle. The McGill defense crowded him in his attempt to put the puck in the net, but the work of Fitzgerald was such as to put a stop to front of the net and the Boston College forward drove the puck in and scored on the net for the first score.

After the ninth Referee Referee Dan Savage stopped the fight. The weights were announced as Reed 155½, Martone, 154.

Chance's Big 'Bone' Deal Proved a Winner

By FRANK CHANCE

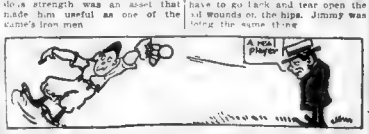
New Manager Boston Red Sox, Former Peerless Leader of Champion Chicago Cubs.

The trade which brought the great Orvie Overall to the Cubs I look on as one of the best in baseball. It was made before I was officially manager of the team, but nevertheless the details and arrangements were all worked out by me.

At the time Ned Hanlon had Overall and looked on him as more or less useless baggage. I had seen the boy pitch as a relief a few times and considered him a remarkable prospect. He appeared to have everything but the experience.

Hanlon, however, was on the athletics. He thought him easy and rode him continually. Naturally the pitcher wasn't in a very good frame of mind toward his boss. He was in the ball park all the time and when he wasn't there he was pitching to batters or being forced to run rings around the ball park in practice. That was supposed to reduce the extra weight he packed.

Now Orvie was naturally a giant and in my opinion it never hurt a pitcher much to have plenty of beef. As events proved later, his tremendous strength was an asset that made him useful as one of the game's iron men.



When the army was right he was an untiring worker, and could go in [illegible] every other day if necessary. [illegible] he's more, he was always willing and anxious to give everything he had.

Put Deal Over on Hanlon for Keeps

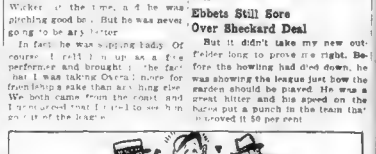
Hanlon, as I have remarked, was down on the bird, and finally asked me [illegible] on him. When we agreed to [illegible] they were [illegible]. Then I went [illegible] Ned and told him.

He wanted a p[illegible]. We had Wicker at the time, and he was pitching good be[illegible]. But he was never going to be any better.

In fact, he was slipping badly. Of course, I told him up as a first performer and brought the fact that I was taking Overall more for friendship's sake than anything else. We both came from the coast and I agreed that I'd try to [illegible] out of the league.



When Hanlon showed that he would go [illegible] way for Wicker, I was a[illegible] to get some money, and put the proposition up to him that he could have my pitcher for Overall and $1,500 in cash. After some haggling, he offered the player and $[illegible].

We [illegible] agreed to toss up, regarding the [illegible] part of it, and I lost. It took a couple of days [illegible] and I got one of the game's greatest [illegible] I want it had day's work [illegible] when you consider that the [illegible] given in exchange had outlived the usefulness with the Cubs, anyhow.

Panned for Letting Cub Favorites Go

From the time he joined our club until his arm wore out, Overall was a wonder. Together with Brown he stood the brunt of the work during our pennant drives, and I doubt if any club has ever had two more dependable performers over such a long stretch at the same time.

In '08, our club [illegible] right up around the top of the parade, and it was evident that we could be champions if we strengthened at a couple of spots. We were a bit weak in one outfield position, and not up to snuff at third base.

So we went into the market. Jimmy Sheckard stuck out as a player I wanted badly. I had designs on Harry Lumley, then playing third for Brooklyn, but Lumley refused to report unless he got more money than I was willing to pay.

Sheckard was a free agent, and I had to outbid the Giants, Pirates and Cardinals to get him. He was a great outfielder and a dangerous hitter, and I knew that he would be a valuable man to have on the club in a pinch.

Within a month I was a David Harum, according to the Chicago experts, and Charlie Ebbets was boiling with wrath. He claimed that I tricked him into the deal and had Sheck laying down in Brooklyn and everything else.

It wasn't true, of course, but the Brooklyn owner never got over it. even brought up the matter at the league meeting a couple of weeks ago, as soon as he met me. And he's still sore about it.

Maloney, the big figure in the deal for him, never reached the heights of greatness, while Sheck, to my mind, was the greatest all round outfielder ever developed.

There wasn't a thing he couldn't do as well as anybody else, and his combined abilities put him in front of the league. He revolutionized fielding in a way, showing a lot of stuff that, with his great and accurate arm, hadn't been thought of before.

Before the other clubs got wise to him, he had won a dozen ball games by picking unwary runners off the bases. With our crafty infielders, Sheck really developed the art of cutting off throws, which is an essential of the game nowadays.

(Tomorrow—Building Up Pennant Club).

Ebbets Still Sore Over Sheckard Deal

But it didn't take my new outfielder long to prove me right. Before the bowling had died down, he was showing the league just how the garden should be played. He was a great hitter and his speed on the bases put a punch in the team that improved it 50 per cent.

I [illegible] business with Charley Ebbets. He wanted the world for his outfielder though he didn't think he was a wonder at the time.

I finally [illegible] over four players—Herzog a pitcher, McCarthy, an outfielder, Johnny Casey, our third baseman and Maloney, one of the fastest [illegible] the game has ever known.

What a [illegible] I got for that deal! Maloney was a Chicago idol. The papers and Charlie Murphy and everybody else jumped on my neck for my [illegible] of wrecking a good team and a thousand other baseball sins.

MARTIN AND FILIPINO IN RING QUARREL

By JACK CONWAY.

Pancho Pancho Villa has heard the call of home. The sensational little Filipino, who battles Terry Martin in a fifteen-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight, is planning to sail for the Philippines without risking a meeting with Frankie Mason, American flyweight champion, or Frankie Genaro.

Villa is eager to return home an undefeated ring king. He would not care to arrive in Manila following a setback at the hands of Mason or Genaro.

What bouts Villa engages in before sailing for the Philippines will probably be with bantamweights. It would be no disgrace for Pancho Pancho, 113 pounds, to lose to a heavier opponent. It would be a different story again if he were to be subdued by a youth of his own poundage.

Terry Martin is making 116 pounds for his tussle with Villa, being confident he would not hesitate to pick Villa to win over the Provident fighter. Reports from New York however, state that the Filipino injured one of his ankles training and has been obliged to remain in bed for the last two days. Consequently he cannot expect to be in the best of condition when he enters the ring this p. m.

• • •

Martin is a rough, tough fighter, but hasn't got a great deal of class. If Villa were at his best, he would be able to circle around Martin much like an airplane can maneuver above a fleet of cumbersome war craft.

• • •

Villa is a better puncher than Martin. The latter devotes too much of his attention to counting with illegal kidney blows. He is the product of street corner fighting and has never advanced at his art. Courage and the ability to take a socking are his only assets.

• • •

Eddie Shevlin, the only major league fighter in New England, is busy training for his ten-round bout with Ray Fryel, which will be staged before the Casino A. C. of Lynn next Monday afternoon.

Sherlin has not bored at a Greater Boston club since he conquered Dave Shade at the Arena. Following his tussle with Shade, Sherlin did a little barnstorming. He walloped Pete Datto at Scranton, Pa., defeated Moe Herscovitz at Montreal, won over Jimmy Kelly at Madison Square Garden, New York, and bested Phil Bloom at Providence.

• • •

The Roxbury welterweight is the only New England fighter who can meet the best men in his class with an even chance of winning. The leading contenders for Mickey Walker's crown, other than Sherlin, are Paul Doyle, Dave Shade and George Ward. Sherlin has won decisions over each of these men.

• • •

Fryel has battled Frankie Schoell, Jack Perry and most of our other star welterweights and has confidence in his ability to win over the Dartmouth professor.

• • •

Sherlin's New England welterweight title will not be at stake, which is probably one of the reasons he consented to meet a tough foe like Fryel. Naturally Sherlin will go to the post a favorite, but such would be the case if he had any other welterweight, with the lone exception of Mickey Walker, as an opponent.

• • •

Jack Murphy has arranged the following preliminaries to the Sherlin-Fryel bout: Semi-final, eight rounds, Frankie Johnson, West End, vs. Tibbie Lowery, Medford, six rounds, Jack Dillon, Malden, vs. Johnny McDonough, South Boston; six rounds, Dan Mahoney, Fort Banks, vs. Tom Lesser of Bangor; six rounds, Frankie Frisoni, Lynn, vs. Barney Rubens, Boston.

E. L. Kenyon writes from the United States Hotel as follows:

"I read Jack Conway's article on Frankie Mason. I have known Mason for years, as I lived in Fort Wayne, Ind., his home town. I have seen him in twenty battles and will say that if some Boston fight promoter could match him with Pancho Villa the fans would see in Mason the cleanest and most scientific box-

CHARLEY WHITE TO BATTLE KANSAS

New York, Dec. 29.—Charlie White and Rocky Kansas, in a fifteen-round decision contest is what Matchmaker Frank Flournoy is representing in Madison Square Garden on Monday night, January 1. The Garden has not yet announced the proposed battle, waiting for the articles to be signed by the managers of both men before doing so.

Rocky Kansas.

Articles of agreement have been sent to Dan Rogers, the manager of Kansas, whose home is in Buffalo and they are expected to be signed and returned immediately. Ike Dorgan, who looks after White's affairs, has accepted terms and will also sign the articles as soon as the Kansas end is closed.

WILLIAMS MUST FIGHT FOR COIN

New York, Dec. 28.—"Kid" Williams and Harry (Battling) Leonard will fight their battle over again on January 15, at the Garden. In their recent encounter Leonard was disqualified for an unintentional foul and his dough was passed over to the State treasury. To make it more fortunate the recompense intended for Williams went the same way. Twas a bitter blow to the lads, coming before Christmas, and neither has recovered as yet.

SAYINGS OF WIVES

THERE'S magic in Winter's fury,
As the snow drifts from the Pole:
But it vanishes with the chronic
"Come down here, and put on coal."

ONCE there was a bird whose wife was what you might call a chatterbox. She turned on the conversation before touching off the gas stove in the A. M., and was still firing when he started saluting Morpheus in the P. M. She never lacked a subject, which was generally her husband. She was fond of dogs, and always bawling him out for not getting ens. Finally he did, and named it Quiet.

MORAL—That was the only way he could make her keep Quiet.

YALE finally beats Harvard—at chess. But at least that's something.

LEW TENDLER TO TAKE ON MORAN

New York, Dec. 29.—Madison Square Garden and the Arena Philadelphia fight clubs are both angling for a left weight contest between Lew Tendler, the crack Quaker City battler, and Pal Moran, the clever New Orleans Italian, and one or the other is sure to land the match to be staged in January.

Moran's showing against Bob Barrett in Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day was a very good one and ever since the promoters who run the Arena have been trying to boost the Southerner with their people. Lew Tendler, The Garden would like to stage the bout on January 15. In Philadelphia the contest would be for only eight rounds, no decision, while if the Garden lands the prize the men will battle over the fifteen-round decision route.

Medbury Says Some Fellows Try to Be a Sheik in the Daytime

By John P. Medbury

EVERY business firm has among its employes a bird who can make the office Santa Claus look like a piker. He has generosity written all over him. It's written in the stars.

He gives more to give than anybody, but he never does it during the Christmas season because there everybody gives and there is no pain in it.

His heart is so big that a doctor would have to listen through four stethoscopes to hear it beat.

He knows there is more joy in giving than in receiving and in just a week and are his fellow workers make themselves happy.

He will give on one condition only and that is that you pay all the expenses.

He's like Kris Kringle with the goods for the children and Santa Claus gets the credit.

There is no end to his generosity. He wouldn't hesitate a minute to give a last year's calendar to a blind man for Christmas.

When it comes to giving away calendars he presents his girl with a 1921 diary and expects her to live in the past.

This fellow has got a way with women and he has also got away with murder.

He reads Arabian Nights and loves to be a Sheik in the daytime.

The only flappers he could get near his tent are the kind you shoo up at night to keep the wind out.

When it comes to taking up a collection in the office he's like a guy with a bucket in a forest full of maple trees. he goes from sap to sap.

But you needn't have any fear of putting your name on the list. He'll never let anybody know you gave anything.

He's so generous that if you give three or four dollars he'll keep his mouth shut and take the blame himself.

If the person who gets the donation kicks about the sum being too large, you can depend upon him to grit his teeth and face the music.

The office Santa Claus will let them think he gave all the money rather than have you embarrassed.

There is nothing he would rather give than nothing.

However, no matter what you say about him, his heart is in his world—but his hand is in your pocket.

I was attending my first dance. It was a swell affair. One on the outside floor. A young gentleman walked over to me and politely asked me if he could have the next dance. My foot then went from under me and I went sprawling on the floor. After a long but difficult time I succeeded in regaining my foot with the assistance of my partner. Everyone stood about

THE ROD AND THE CHILD.

Should children be spanked?

A great deal of attention has been given to this subject recently.

Some parents assert strongly that they have raised obedient families and that they have never spanked their children.

Other parents maintain that they could not have made their children obedient without resorting to a form of physical punishment.

There is much difference to children.

Some children must suffer pain before they become submissive to the wishes and desires of their parents.

Children must be reasoned with and not whipped.

But the same sort of treatment will not work out with all.

Parents must study their offspring and decide how to ... hand obedience.

It is a big ... present ... how a child to discipline.

It is hard to correct this fault ... when the youngsters get into their

HOUSE IN THE HILLS

How Happiness Found by a Man and a Woman Vanished and Left Him Alone

By Evangeline Weir

IT stood lonely and deserted [illegible] the doors fastened [illegible] the flowers tangled among the tall grass. The sun shone down upon it and the wind wrapped around it bringing with it the scent of the mountains just as it did one morning five years before when the tragedy occurred which turned the little house of happiness into a house of mourning.

"SHE IS MINE—MINE! I CLAIM HER IN DEATH AS IN LIFE."

Away from the turmoil and heat of a big town John Delmar and his wife had come to the little house among the hills looking forward to the simple life with keen pleasure, planning long walks and quiet evenings which were never to see fulfillment.

Just one week of quiet [illegible] of peace so great that they [illegible] not realize its perfect happiness—then the end.

It was a glorious day among the hills. They arose and took a long walk while the dew was still upon the green things and the perfumed air kissed their cheeks and stirred their hair as they walked arm in arm. It was a pleasure to be alive and the woman lifted her face—a face glowing with love and happiness—the man bent his head and kissed her, there was no need of words.

As they went into the little house by the wayside she turned at the door and looked back at the hills and said

Almost Too Beautiful

"It is almost too beautiful—so beautiful that it hurts."

And the man remembered through the weary years when [illegible] the look upon her face as she said it.

He ran whistling up the stairs stooping to pick up a flower she had dropped. Then he crossed the hall softly to the room where the babies were asleep in their low bed. He kissed them gently and thanked God for his treasures and the quiet home among the hills.

Going to his [illegible] he sat down to look over the [illegible] mail which lay in a great heap on his desk.

Suddenly, from the room below, came a quick, sharp cry of pain, then a long drawn one of intense agony. He leaped down the stairs like one mad, for the cry was that of the woman he loved.

She stood moaning with quick sharp drawn breath [illegible] white and drawn, all the happiness and radiant life gone out of it. He put a question, and she pointed to a broken cake on the table. Then her head fell against his arm, and he remembered with a great horror which almost stopped the beating of his heart that she had been using a deadly poison in the preservation of some moths of [illegible] a collection.

She looked up at him with a wild appeal in her dark eyes and saw the hopelessness in his. He turned his face away and groaned. With youth, love, children, and all things which count for the best of life, and she was dying through her own carelessness. And out in the sunshine some one was singing "God's in His Heaven, All's Right With the World."

Called for Help

He rushed to the door and called for help, knowing that she was past help. Then he returned to the stricken woman and taking her in his arms, held her close against his hot [illegible] heart.

Death came speedily [illegible] he was thankful. She went out suddenly like the flame of a candle which had burned low.

Across the table he saw the broken cake—just that small cake between him and the sleep which he coveted. He put out his hand and touched it, but drew it back as he remembered the babies.

They found him with the dead woman clasped in his arms, his cheek against her rumpled hair. It was only when the doctor tried to unclasp his stiff fingers that he was conscious of her presence. He turned fiercely on the doctor.

"She is mine—mine!" he cried. "You shall not separate us. I claim her in death as in life."

Then the patter of tiny feet on the stair, and the frightened children crept to his side. His eyes moistened as he gathered them into his arms. There was no time for selfish sorrow.

Words of Love

He soothed them with words of love and when the neighbors gathered around the dead he took them for a walk. His pain so great that [illegible] He feared [illegible] the dreary [illegible] of life [illegible] to be dragged through death seemed sweet [illegible] he prayed, "God let me live [illegible] need me."

They buried her among the [illegible] she loved. The music of the pines swept down from the heights and life flowed on. The little ripple which had for a moment disturbed the calm surface was lost in the great ocean. One life did not count to the millions who remained to laugh, to love, to struggle, and to suffer.

HOW MUCH IS DUE YOU?

By Beatrice Fairfax

"A LITTLE more consideration was due me," exclaimed Clara flouncing out of the office where she had been kept waiting for an hour while the official she wanted to see was dictating letters. "He could have stopped five minutes to give me the courtesy of an interview. I waited an hour and that's [illegible]."

"Did you see him?" asked Gertrude.

"No—I waited as long as dignity would permit," Clara said angrily. "Who does he think he is anyway?"

"Who do you think you are?" Gertrude ventured. "You wanted the interview. He had something to offer you and I don't see that [illegible] got you anything to rave out [illegible] that. You were just [illegible] your face [illegible]"

Then they brought their [illegible] Clara felt that Gertrude had [illegible] her by failing to recognize what was "due" her.

As a matter of fact, there isn't much "due" any of us!

Nothing Is Gained

Nothing is gained by pride and a sense of importance. A busy world is surprisingly kind and courteous [illegible] of the time, and when [illegible] there is generally an excellent explanation of its indifference—even of its rudeness.

To take a little cavalier treatment good-naturedly and to be pleasantly surprised and grateful for all the consideration we get is both wise and sane.

After all each individual is pretty deeply involved in a network of [illegible] obligations and [illegible] a spider sitting in the centre of a web of [illegible] requirements. And when other folks can't drop everything to meet our needs, there's nothing to be offended about.

What we call "decent pride" and sensitiveness can generally be reduced to lowest terms of selfishness or impatience.

When we're ill and folks don't show us the attention we call our due, why let this make us miserable?

When we want aid or advice and folks don't drop all their concerns to attend to our wants why get excited over it?

World Owes Nothing

The world owes us nothing. Most folks are not in anyway obligated to give us their time and consideration. Yet all the time and everywhere we are meeting with kindness and generous treatment. Often we have neither earned nor merited it. But it doesn't occur to us to dwell at length on all the splendid things our neighbors and friends stop to do for us. Those we take for granted. But when some one fails—then we rise in majesty and exclaim that we are not getting our due.

A little humiliation keeps us from getting an exaggerated sense of our own importance. It is curative to get less than we imagine we deserve. It makes us take stock of self—and the world about [illegible] good-natured[illegible] we don't get [illegible] to us [illegible] lucky [illegible] really is [illegible] part of [illegible]

When My Ship Comes In

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

IN a recent picture I told you about one of Dan Cupid's favorite love stories, "When My Ship Comes In," and I got as far as the third book, called "Worship," following "Friendship" and "Courtship."

Here a tiny ship has come in, and the dark head and the gold have found it truly a treasure ship—solid gold, worth more than its weight in rubies and sapphires and diamonds—a source of unending, unwearying investigation and delight.

Love sighs a bit here—for he is not always in perfect accord with Dame Nature. He considers her too cold sometimes. He wishes that Courtship would not have to suffer eclipse and over-shadowing by the rising planet of Worship—he wishes the two could go always hand in hand. And yet there comes a day when he develops deep interest in this new human and a new love-story.

The fourth—here Love ends his volume and writes on a day the reluctant "Finis" to this story of the four "ships," a story so lovingly begun, so wildly and ardently sentimentalized over, so unselfishly and worshipfully lived, so peacefully and calmly and humorously ended, the fourth book of the volume about "ships."

Here the goodly ship—the last ship—comes quietly to anchor—to the harbor of its last sailing. Black head and gold are both almost white. They sit in long silences, smiling silences. He is content to have his hand upon her shoulder. That baby who was the chief character in the third book—is gone away into another love-story of Dan Cupid's writing.

They are deeply interested in the new apple-green paint on the ceiling of their porch—the perennials in the garden, the state of the red brick walk, and the mildness of his tobacco, and perhaps the latest thing that the gran' baby said; such happily simple things. They smile at the world. But they do not smile at each other—save with love. Their ship has come in indeed—and it is called Partner-ship Comrade-ship. "This is the last one," says Dan. "Is it indeed the best?"

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Anne Felt More Comfortable After She Had Decided to Call on Ralph Lacey to Ask His Help in Solving Her Problem

By Ann Lisle

WITH my determination to call on Ralph Lacy for help in handling the Daul-Lee-Dick West situation, came a great sense of peace.

AND IF HE'S THE CAD YOU THINK HIM—HE'S HERE TO BLACKMAIL YOU. I SUGGESTED

I felt that this meant doing my best for him. Mr. Lacy has no pressing interests outside his business world. His adoption of Miss May as an "aunt" proved this. So he [illegible] time to help a friend in need. And he is capable of real help. Knowing how to think constructively and having the resources of his paper I felt sure he would enjoy helping me cut my way out of my difficulties.

A good night's rest and a hearty breakfast sent me down to the office in a whirl of energy that [illegible] landed me there ahead of Miss May. The first thing I did was to telephone Mr. Lacy's office, but young Jerry reported Mr. Lacy out of town for the day.

"Got any message you want to leave Miss Harrison?" he asked with a note of personal interest in his fresh young voice.

"Do you think Mr. Lacy is likely to come into the office at all today?" she asked.

"Sure thing. He's only gone upstate a ways and he'll come in most likely around 5 or 6," replied Jerry. "If you was to leave word where the boss can call you I'll tell him to do it."

"Will you be there when he comes in? Are you sure to be, I mean?" I asked, wanting to avoid the uncertainty of waiting and perhaps in vain.

"Sure thing. I don't leave this office if there's a chance o' getting a word with the boss by sticking around an extra hour or so. Not me, Mis' Harrison. And I don't forget any message from [illegible] especially if they come from you."

"Jerry, when you're a year or two older you might start thinking about a diplomatic post. I have [illegible] you're a very satisfactory person to give messages to and to ask information from. Thank you and remember I'm counting on you. Good-by."

"Yes [illegible] on me Mis' Harrison. And the top of the morning to you."

[illegible] the quality [illegible] which is engaging [illegible] suggestive [illegible] I hung up the receiver and went about the day's work. Miss May came in just as I was getting [illegible] We consulted notes, and then both plunged into [illegible] new copy for the [illegible] Company with [illegible] she is [illegible] marked [illegible] I to [illegible] up the first [illegible] Sturges [illegible] page advertisement for the Sunday supplements.

"We've been about all we can do. I am thinking of going to the office at noon to ask Miss May to bring me in a sandwich and a container of hot coffee from [illegible] if you don't mind."

"I don't mind," she smiled back. "I don't like the idea of you not having the [illegible] office [illegible] need an office assistant."

[illegible] I think we need a [illegible] each of us undertaking two big [illegible] is almost too [illegible] And any minute may see new [illegible] along. We can go on having art drawings made [illegible] a bit of [illegible]

"Let's [illegible] for an office [illegible] Miss May [illegible]

[illegible] But [illegible] to do than I [illegible]

Whereat she left me and I plunged back into my work, interrupting myself only long enough to eat the sandwich and delicious apple Miss May brought me later and to linger over the delicious hot coffee which stimulated me to the point where I [illegible] right back into the current of work. I was [illegible] that I [illegible] the telephone buzzer sound [illegible] and looked up in amazement to see Miss May silhouetted in the doorway.

"I've taken care of all the other calls that came in this afternoon," she said. "But here's one which seems to require your attention."

MIND OVER BODY

By Brice Belden, M. D.

IT is a fact that a melancholy worrying mind lessens resisting power and makes the tissues more susceptible to disease. The influence of the mind over the body can hardly be overestimated. Pessimism, fear, hopelessness and gloom poison the very sources of life, weaken every [illegible] and [illegible] individual be a [illegible] retard recovery.

There is a popular saying: "If You Believe It, It's So." There is a lot of truth in this affirmation. You must cultivate a psychology of self-confidence. If you are in the habit of regarding yourself as weak or diseased or hopeless, change your thoughts for the notion that the world really [illegible] and that you [illegible] worth while.

[illegible] a matter of [illegible] and [illegible] whose [illegible] in a positive manner you will create a psychological pattern which the life processes will constantly weave out and picture in profitable ways.

Unwholesome thoughts will in the same manner produce evil results. As in the Bible parable, we all start with the same number of talents and it is for each one of us to decide whether to put them to good use or bury them.

Pascal, one of the keenest thinkers who ever lived, said: "Learn of those who have been bound as you are and have been cured of the disease of which you would be rid. Begin as they did—namely, acting as if they believed."

It is for you to begin. Establish good mental poise. Adopt the right way of thinking. Change your thoughts. Smile.

THE PRIDE OF PALOMAR By PETER B. KYNE

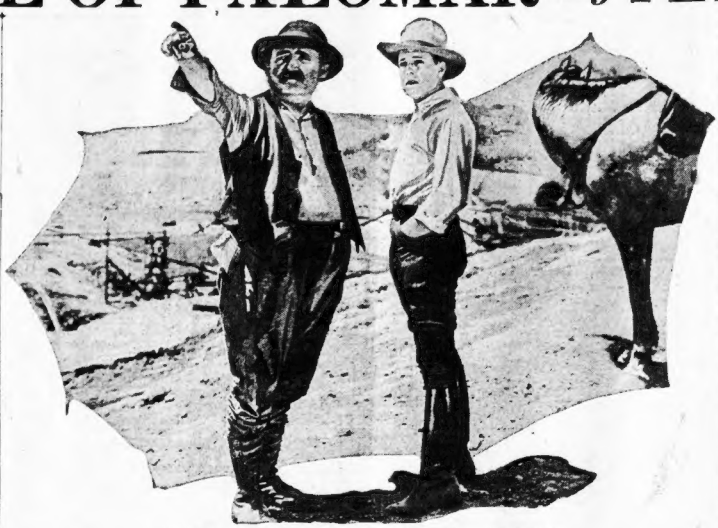
An Engrossing Story of Southern California by the Author of "Kindred of the Dust"



Bill Conway describes to Don Mike the work on the big dam

START THIS NEW STORY TODAY

The story opens on the Rancho Palomar, an extensive tract in Southern California. It is the estate of the Farrels, an ancient California family dating back to the days of the Spanish conquistadores, and enlivened with a dash of Irish.

Old Don Miguel Farrel, alone on the heavily mortgaged rancho with only his last faithful retainer, Pablo Arkelan, and the latter's expansive wife, receives a telegram from the War Department at Washington announcing the death in battle in Siberia of his only son, "Don Mike."

False news, as the subsequent scene at the Presidio army fields show where "Don Mike" is mustered out of the service. On the train, homeward bound, he encounters a party of three—an overbearing, wealthy Japanese, a prosperous-appearing American with a down-East accent, and the latter's beautiful daughter. He has dinner with the daughter. Don Mike leaves the train at Gespe and walks home, discovering the grave of his father. Kay Parker arrives at the ranch and tells Pablo Don Mike is not dead. Don Mike arrives and takes charge. He tells the Parkers they may stay as his guests. Don Mike meets his father's enemy and thrashes him. He then drives with Kay to El Toro to attach Loustalot's bank account on an old debt of Don Miguel's.

It is a Cosmopolitan Production, direction of Frank Borzage, and featuring Forrest Stanley and Marjorie Daw. It is released as a Paramount picture.

"CONFOUND you Farrel! You realized the possibilities of that basin, then?"

"Years ago. The basin comes to a bottle-neck between two high hills, all you have to do is dam that narrow gorge, and when the Rio San Gregorio is up and brimming in freshet time, you'll have a lake a hundred feet deep, a mile wide and five miles long before you know it. Did you ever consider the possibility of leading a ditch from the lake thus formed along the shoulder of El Palomar, that forty-five-hundred-foot peak for which the ranch is named, and giving it a sixty-five per cent. nine-hundred-foot drop to a snug little power-station at the base of the mountain. You could develop thirty or forty thousand horse-power very easily and sell it easier; after your water had passed through the penstock and delivered the power, you could run it off through a lateral to the main ditch down the San Gregorio and sell it to your Japanese farmers for irrigation."

Never Expected Backing

"By Jupiter, I believe you would have done something with this ranch if you had had the backing, Farrel!"

"Never speculated very hard on securing the backing." Don Mike admitted, with a frank grin. "We always lived each day as if it were the last, you know. But over in Siberia, far removed from all my easy-going associations, both inherited and acquired, I commenced dreaming of possibilities in the Anza Caliente basin."

"Well then, since you insist, let's go over there and have your curiosity satiated," Parker agreed, with the best grace possible.

While the Parkers returned to the hacienda to change into their riding-clothes, Miguel Farrel strolled over to the corral where Pablo Arkelan, wearing upon his leathery countenance the closest imitation of a smile that had ever lighted that dark expanse, joined him and, with Farrel, leaned over the corral fence and gazed at the horses within. For a long time, neither spoke; then, while his glance still appraised the horses, Don Mike stiffened a thumb and drove it with considerable force into Pablo's ancient ribs. Carolina, engaged in banging out the Parker wash in the yard of her casa, observed Don Mike bestow this infrequent accolade of approbation and affection, and her heart swelled with pride. Ah, yes; it was good to have the child back on the rancho again.

Never Heard of Elijah

Carolina and Pablo had never heard that the ravens fed Elijah; they had never heard of Elijah. Nevertheless, if they had, they would not have envied him the friendship of those divinely directed birds, for the Farrels had always fed Pablo and Carolina and their numerous brood, now raised and scattered over the country-side. At sight of that prod in the ribs, Carolina dismissed forever a worry that had troubled her vaguely during the period between old Don Miguel's death and the return of young Don Miguel—the fear that a decline of coin and plenty had ended. Presently, she lifted a falsette voice in a Spanish love-song two centuries old.

I await the morrow, all through the night
For the entrancing music and dancing
With thee, my song-bird, my heart's delight,
Come dance, my Nina, in thy mantilla,
Think of our love and do not say no.

Hasten then my treasure, grant me this pleasure,
Dance then tomorrow the bolero.

Over at the corral, Pablo rolled a cigarette, lighted it, and permitted a thin film of smoke to trickle through his nostrils. He, too, was content.

"Carolina," he remarked presently in English, "he happy to beat hell."

"I haven't any right to be, but, for some unknown reason, I'm feeling gay myself," his master replied.

He started toward the harness-room to get the saddle for Panchito, and Pablo lingered a moment at the fence, gazing after him curiously. Could it be possible that Don Miguel Jose Maria Federico Noriaga Farrel had, while sojourning in the cold land of the Americanos, lost a modicum of that particularity with women which had formerly distinguished him in the eyes of his humble retainers?

"Damn my soul eef I don't known something!" Pablo muttered, and followed for a saddle for the gray gelding.

Holding Horses

When the Parkers emerged from the hacienda, they found Don Mike and Pablo holding the horses and waiting for them. Kay wore a beautiful tailored riding habit of dark unfinished material, shot with a faint mixture of gray; her boots were of shining black undressed leather, and she wore a pair of little silver-mounted spurs. The sight of which caused Pablo to exchange sage winks with his master. Her white pique stock was fastened by an exquisite little cameo stick-pin from under the brim of a black beaver sailor hat, set all down on her head, her wistful brown eyes looked up at Don Mike, and caught the quick glance of approval with which he appraised her, before turning to her mother.

"The black mare for you, Mrs. Parker," he suggested. "She's a regular old sweetheart and single-foots beautifully. I think you'll find that stock-saddle a far more comfortable seat than the saddle Miss Kay is using."

"I know I'm not as light and graceful as I used to be, Mike," the amiable soul assured him, "but it irks me to have men notice it. You might have given me an opportunity to decline Kay's saddle. There is such a thing as being too thoughtful ,you know."

"Mother!" Kay cried reproachfully.

"You're a nice boy, Michael," she murmured, for his ear alone. "Why, you old-fashioned young rascal!"—as Don Mike stooped and held out his hand. She placed her left foot in it and was lifted lightly into the saddle. When he had adjusted the stirrups to fit her, he turned to aid Kay, only to discover that the gallant Panchito had already performed the honors for that young lady by squatting until she could reach the stirrup without difficulty.

Hounds Ahead

Parker rode the gray horse, and Farrel had appropriated a pinto cow pony that Pablo used when line-riding.

With the hounds questing ahead of them, the four jogged up the San Gregorio, Don Mike leading the way, with Kay riding beside him. From time to time she stole a sideiong glance at him, riding with his chin on his breast, apparently oblivious of her presence. She knew that he was not in a mood to be entertaining today, to be a carefree squire of dames; his mind was busy grappling with problems that threatened not only him but everything in life that he held to be worth while.

"Do we go through that gate?" the girl queried, pointing to a five-rail gate in a wire fence that straggled across the valleys and up the hillside.

He nodded.

"Of course you do not have to go through it," he teased her. "Panchito can go over it. Pie for him. About five feet and a half."

"Enough for all practical purposes," she replied, and touched her ridiculous little spurs to the animal's flank, took a firm grip on the reins with both hands, and sat down firmly in the saddle. "All right, boy!" she cried, and, at the invitation, Panchito pricked up his ears and broke into an easy canter, gradually increasing his speed and taking the gate apparently without effort. Don Mike watched to see the girl rise abruptly in her seat as the horse came down on the other side of the gate. But no! She was still sitting down in the saddle, her little hands resting lightly on the horse's neck; and while Farrel watched her in downright admiration and the mother sat, white and speechless on the black mare, Kay galloped ahead a hundred yards, turned, and came back over the gate again.

"Oh, isn't he a darling?" she cried. "His gaits his footup underling. His nut-like flavor will thrill your appetite—and each spoonful means so much in permanently relieving constipation and in warding off this gravest national ailment. Kellogg recipes are printed on each package.

Start the entire family eating Kellogg's Bran today. See the color come back to faded cheeks; see the snap that will go into lagging steps. Kellogg's Bran is wonderful. All grocers sell it!

"You are encouraging my daughter to kill herself," the older woman charged Farrel. "Kay, you tomboy, do not jump that gate again! Suppose that horse should stumble and throw you."

"Nonsense, mother. That's mere old hop-Scotch for Panchito. One doesn't get a jumping jack to ride every day, and all I've ever done has been to pussyfoot through Central Park."

"Do you mean to tell me you've never taken a hurdle before?" Don Mike was scandalized. She nodded.

"She'll do," Parker assured him proudly.

Farrel confirmed this verdict with a nod and opened the gate. They rode through. Kay waited for him to close the gate. He saw that she had been captivated by Panchito, and as their glances met, his smile was a reflection of hers—a smile throughly and childishly happy.

"If you'd sell him to me, Don Mike," she pleaded. "I'll give you a ruinous price for him."

"He is not for sale, Miss Kay."

"But you were going to give him away to your late battery commander!"

He held up his right hand with the red scar on the back of it, but made no further reply.

"Why will you not sell him to me?" she pleaded. "I want him so."

"I love him," he answered at that, "and I could only part with him—for love. Some day, I may give him to somebody worth while, but for the present I think I shall be selfish and continue to own him. He's a big, powerful animal, and if he can carry weight in a long race, he's fast enough to make me some money."

"Let me ride him in the try-out," she pleaded. "I weigh just a hundred and twenty."

"Very well. Tomorrow I'll hitch up a work-team and disk the heart out of our old race-track—"

Oh, yes; we have such a thing" in reply to her lifted brows. "My grandfather Mike induced my great-grandfather Noriaga to build it way back in the Forties. The Indians and vaqueros used to run scrub races in those days—in fact, it was their main pastime."

"Where is this old race-track?"

"Down in the valley. A fringe of oaks hides it. It's grass-grown and it hasn't been used in twenty-five years, except when the Indians in this part of the country forgather in the valley occasionally and pull off some scrub races."

"How soon can we put it in commission?" she demanded eagerly.

"I'll disk it tomorrow. The ground is soft now, after this recent rain. Then I'll harrow it well and run a cultipacker over it—well, by the end of the week it ought to be a fairly fast track."

"Goody! We'll go in to El Toro tomorrow and I'll wire to San Francisco for a stop-watch. May I sprint Panchito a little across that meadow?"

"Wait a moment, Miss Kay. We shall have something to sprint after in a few minutes, I think." As the hounds gave tongue in a path of willows they had been investigating far to the right, Don Mike pulled up his horse and listened. "Hot trail," he informed her. "They'll all be babbling in a moment."

He was right.

"If it's a coyote, he'll sneak up the wash of the river," he informed the girl, "but if it's a cat, he'll cut through that open space to tres in the oaks beyond—Ha! There goes a mountain lion. After him!"

His alert pony went from a halt to a gallop, following a long, lithe tawny animal that loped easily into view, coming from the distant willow thicket. In an instant, Kay was beside him.

"Read him off," he commanded curtly. "This ruin of Pablo's is done in a quarter-mile dash, but Panchito can outrun that cat without trying. Don't be afraid of him. They're cowardly brutes. Get between him and the oaks and turn him back to me. Ride him down! He'll dodge out of your way."

Uncoiled Riata

She saw that he was uncoiling his riata as he spoke, and divined his purpose, as, with a cluck and a boot to Panchito, she thundered after the big cat, her heart thumping with mingled fear and excitement. Evidently this was an old game to Panchito, however, for he pinned his ears a little and headed straight for the quarry. Seemingly he knew what was expected of him, and had a personal interest in the affair, for as he came up to the animal, he attempted to run the panther down. The animal merely snarled and gave ground, while gradually Panchito "hazed" him until the frightened creature was headed at right angles to the course he had originally pursued. And now Don Mike came racing up and cut him off.

"Catch him; catch him!" Kay screamed excitedly. "Don't let him get away!" She drove Panchito almost on top of the panther, and forced the beast to stop suddenly and dodge toward the approaching Farrel. As Panchito dashed by, Kay had a glimpse of Don Mike riding in his looped riata, swinging in wide, slow concentric circles —casually, even. As she brought Panchito round on his nimble heels, she saw Don Mike rise in his stirrups and throw.

Even as the loop left his hand, he appeared to have no doubt of the outcome, for Kay saw him make a quick turn of his rope round the pommel of his saddle, whirl at a right angle, and, with a whoop of pure, unadulterated joy, go by her at top speed, dragging the panther behind him. The loop had settled over the animal's body and been drawn taut around his loins.

Pinto Stopped

Suddenly the pinto came to an abrupt pause, sliding on his haunches to avoid a tiny arroyo, too wide for him to leap. The strain on the riata was thus momentarily slackened, permitting the big cat to scramble to all fours and turn to investigate this trap into which he had fallen. Instantly he charged, spitting and open-mouthed, and, for some unknown reason led the screaming fury straight toward Kay and Panchito. The cat realized this, also, for suddenly he decided that Panchito offered the best opportunity to vent his rage, and changed his course accordingly.

Quick as he did so, Farrel whirled his pinto in the opposite direction, with the result that the panther left the ground with the jerk and was dragged through the air for six feet before striking heavily on his back. He was too dazed to struggle while Farrel dragged him through the grass and halted under the live oaks. While the badly shaken cat was struggling to his feet and swaying drunkenly, Farrel heard the end of his riata over a limb, took a new hitch on his pommel, and ran out, drawing the screaming, clawing animal off the ground until he swung, head down, the ripping fangs at his front paws tearing the grass up in great tufts.

"Try Sylpho-Nathol and see"

"You simply can't appreciate Sylpho-Nathol until you've used it. Edith Dennison told me how good it was. I couldn't believe her until I had tried it myself. Nothing but a bathroom will get, no matter how clean you keep it. Well, Sylpho-Nathol chased that odor away from ours almost overnight. It is a necessary safeguard that particular housekeepers simply should not be without.

"I've put Sylpho-Nathol to the hardest kind of tests. It has never failed me. Most women dislike disinfectants and deodorants because so many have a horrid smell, or have to be mixed so carefully. Sylpho-Nathol hasn't either of these faults.

"Its faint, friendly odor doesn't linger. Though 4½ times stronger than carbolic acid, it's as safe to have in the house as a cake of scouring soap. It cannot hurt your skin, nor injure household things. And just a teaspoonful in a quart of warm water makes a clean-smelling, pearly-gray solution that's ready for immediate use."

Sylpho-Nathol has many important household uses. It makes a mop-water that destroys germs which get into cracks and crannies. It is a positive deodorant for sinks and drains and other hard-to-get-at places. It keeps garbage cans sweet and clean and drives away the flies. It is an effective sprinkle for cellars and attics. In fact, it should be used wherever there is a chance for odors to start or germs to breed.

Sylpho-Nathol is also a splendid antiseptic that should be in the medicine chest as a healing and effective safeguard against infection from cuts, burns, bruises and other home accidents.

Sylpho-Nathol comes in four handy sizes, 15c, 35c, 65c, $1.25. Most good grocers and druggists have it. If yours hasn't, he can get it easily. Just ask for it by the name—"Sylpho-Nathol."

U. S. Steel Leads Group Upward in New York Market That Displays Strength

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

I've just had an interview with—you'd never guess whom.

Will Rogers, the Oklahoma cowboy rope thrower and comedian, whose witty wisdom has become the talk of the town and whose income would make President Harding envious.

• • •

Knowing that I write for business people Will remarked that he would give me a strictly business talk.

He started out with the following solution for international debt problems:

"Have France buy from Germany all the light wines and beer at the German prices, and sell them to us at the prices prevailing here. That will give France enough money to pay England and us both and restore us back to where we were before the war—I mean, we'll have the liquor back."

• • •

His next comment on international affairs was:

"I see the big fellows in Europe are holding a conference in London. It fell through. It's getting awful hard for nations to pay each other without one of them having some money. They called it an economic conference, and as we did not attend, it was."

• • •

Next: "We are getting along too good. We are getting to be too prosperous. Don't you know that over and above taxes we are now allowed to keep about 10 per cent. of our gross earnings? Washington thinks that's too much. So we are going to make another loan to Europe. Europe owes us eleven billion dollars already and we're going to let her have a billion and a half more. This will make twelve and a half billions even. This will make it much easier to figure the interest. We're not going to get any interest, of course, but it must be figured."

• • •

Will has quite an idea of the importance of J. P. Morgan, you will have no difficulty in gathering from the following:

"Mr. Morgan paid a little visit to Washington the other day. I knew there would be something doing when I heard he had gone down there. He goes to Washington every year and lays out the following year's program. Then he goes to Europe and he maps out their schedule. Then he is through for the year and goes back and sits down and collects. What a tough life that bird has!"

• • •

His next was: "I notice by the papers that Allan Ryan has come out of the bankruptcy court with a coat of white wash. He says he has reformed and that he is going to do better next time. To my jay way of thinking he didn't do badly last time—he failed for a little more than ten millions."

• • •

This little tribute he paid to the banker: "Bankers, I see, are very, very strongly against the soldiers' bonus. But they are just as strongly in favor of the bankers' bonus. You used to pay interest when you got a loan. But now the bankers won't let you have a loan just for the interest rate. They see to it that they get a bonus each time they make a oan."

• • •

Will had Governor Edwards, of New Jersey, on the stage the other night, made a speech about him, and then darted off the stage, leaving the Governor standing alone to face the audience.

"Here I am, but what do you want?" asked Governor Edwards.

"I want a drink," shouted Will so that every one could hear. This brought down the house. But Governor Edwards was equal to the occasion.

"Come to Jersey and you can get it!" he cried, and won even more applause.

• • •

I asked Will about his stock experiences.

"Nix," he replied. "No stock market for mine. I've been East here for eighteen years and haven't got one share of stock—outside of some shares Harry Sinclair sent my kid. By sending some to the kid he figured he could hook me, especially when the dividends came along. But I didn't fall even then. I'm not falling for any oil stocks. I own the ranch I lived on and, though oil has been found there, I won't even lease it. Anyway, I think they've bored holes all around my land and stolen all the oil below it."

POND CREEK AT NEW TOP AFTER FORD BUYS

U. S. Steel led its group upward when the New York stock market displayed late-day strength. Money renewed at 5, then lifted to 6 per cent., the highest in days.

Pond Creek, on sertngth of the announcement that Henry Ford had bought this largely Boston-owned coal company for a price estimated around $15,000,000, set a record high, up 4⅛ at 41. It then receded slightly.

Highs for 1922 were made by Endicott-Johnson, North American Co., up around 5 points, Hudson Motor and Cluett-Peabody.

In the afternoon cash transactions continued numerous and included a large variety of low-priced and dividend-paying shares. Activity in the oils was unabated, California Petroleum showing the most pronounced strength with a rise of 3 points.

Studebaker reached 114½. Baldwin was bid up to 138⅛, but met a considerable volume of stock at the higher level and reacted.

Speculation was quiet during the morning, the interruption to wire communications by the storm restricting outside orders considerably. Prices pursued a slow upward course with an absence of the recent striking fluctuations in some of the popular shares.

Expectation of favorable dividend action was responsible for marked gains in some of the industrials and specialties, with the general [illegible] however, embracing a wide variety of shares.

Speculative interest was revived in the railroads, dividend-paying and low-priced shares moving up smartly, with Toledo, St. Louis & Southwestern preferred rising 4½ points.

Buying of the oils was in large volume, particularly producers and refiners and Pacific Oil.

Queries of interest to investors will be answered in this column or by mail. Send questions, with stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

KENNECOTT.

To T. Z., Quincy—Kennecott ought to be a fair speculation on recessions for the long pull. The company is very well fixed, and its direct and indirect interests are entirely in low cost mines. Besides its original mineral holdings in Alaska it owns 38 per cent., or 616,500 shares of Utah Copper (the latter owning 51 per cent. of Nevada Consolidated), practically all of the Braden property in South America and a 51 per cent. interest in the Mother Lode Mining Company in Alaska. It is said to be earning over $4 a share.

RADIO CORPORATION.

To R. C., Cambridge—Radio Corporation of America common comes after the preferred in priority on assets and dividends. It has been selling higher than the preferred through a vagary of the speculative market. It is uncertain how soon any dividend will be paid. This radio concern holds basic patents and is under excellent management which would seem to assure it of a good degree of success.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL 4S.

To C. L. T., Chestnut Hill—Some of the bonds of the Illinois Central are of the highest grade of railroad bonds, and all of them have a good rating. The road has been making big strides in earnings since 1919, the year in which most railroads were at serious disadvantage. In 1921 it earned nearly twice its interest charges and in the first six months of this year earnings were about two and a half times fixed charges. Among its bond issues are Louisville, New Orleans & Texas collateral 4s, 1953. They are a first collateral lien on 500 miles and on land in Mississippi, being secured by the entire issue of $16,832,000 Louisville, New Orleans & Texas first 4s, 1934, and $9,104,000 second income 5s, 1934. In denominations of $100 and $1,000, they yield 5.25 per cent. Interest May and November.

PRICES WORK OFF IN GRAIN MARKET

In the Chicago pit, with the exception of December corn, grains sold lower with an appearance of weakness. A lower opening at Liverpool for wheat was an influence. There wheat was down ⅝d to ¾d at the start. At 2 o'clock it was ⅝d to 1d lower. Chicago prices were: Wheat—December, 126¾; May, 124⅛ to 124¼; July 114 to 114⅛. Corn—December, 73 to 73¼; May, 71¼ to 71½; July, 71 to 71¼.

HAMPDEN SEEN IN A COMEDY NEW TO BOSTON

Walter Hampden presented "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," one of his repertoire plays, at the Boston Opera House.

His performance here out the past evidences of the genius which seems to touch almost any play and make it a masterpiece.

"A New Way to Pay Old Debts," is a delightful comedy by Philip Massinger, arranged in a prologue and two acts.

The story is wound round an impossible, hard, inhuman, selfish, self attaining father who tries to "sell" his daughter for social position. Wealth and beauty can obtain the highest of social positions, is the doctrine he preaches. Even going so far as to sacrifice the purity of his daughter, he tells her to play the game, to forsake being a virgin and "kiss closely." All for the sake of catching a knight. But Margaret, the daughter, loves another not so high in position or fame or even fortune.

Brutally the father tries to swindle anybody and everybody in the north of England out of their home and property. And he succeeds. Although the play is far back in history, it is quite modern in plot. The very knight whom the father has designed, after hearing the young girl's pleas for her love for another, enters into secrecy with her. In the end the daughter marries her sweetheart through the foolish play of her own father, who thinks he is marrying her off to the knight.

For real ability the cast cannot be excelled.

USES METAL SODIUM IN PLACE OF PLATE

DONLE VACUUM TUBE AND HOOKUP

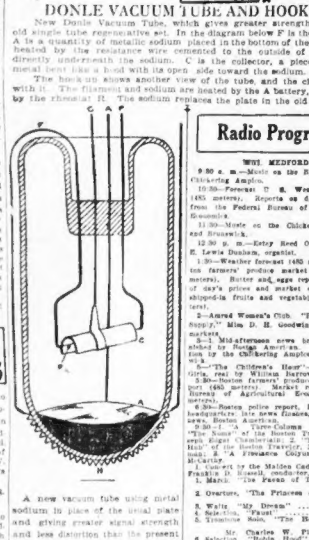
New Donle Vacuum Tube, which gives greater strength than the old single tube from which the grid now F is the filament. A is a quantity of metallic sodium placed in the bottom of the tube, and heated by the resistance wire cemented to the outside of the glass, directly underneath the sodium. C is the collector, a piece of sheet metal bent like a hood with its open side toward the sodium.

The hook-up shows another view of the tube, and the circuit used with it. The filament and sodium are heated by the A battery, controlled by the rheostat R. The sodium replaces the plate in the old tube.



A new vacuum tube using metal sodium in place of the usual plate, giving greater strength, accuracy and less distortion that the present tube is the latest of the speech making radio inventions of the year.

The tube is the invention of Harold P. Donle, chief engineer of the Connecticut Telephone and Telegraph Company. Recently he recently demonstrated the tube before the Institute of Radio Engineers in New York.

The Donle tube is practically a two-element tube in which the grid has been eliminated. In addition to its greater sensitivity and freedom from distortion it is less critical and never requires to do the three-element tubes in a laboratory to set.

According to Mr. Donle, there is an electron flow from the filament to the collector. In an observe way the heated sodium gives off ionized atoms that assist in the passage of electrons.

This flow of electrons varies more greatly with changing potential applied to the control tube. This explains the greater sensitivity of these tubes.

With a twenty-foot wire hanging outside of the window of the Engineering Societies Building where the demonstration took place, signals from WOR at Newark, came in with great volume and louder than with the ordinary three-element tube.

The new tube, according to Mr. Donle, will soon be available for popular use.

Americanism Needed in the Colleges

President Garfield of Williams College announced recently that it was not necessary to pay a laborer sufficient wages to maintain a family.

Now comes President Hibben of Princeton University and declares that he favors the cancellation of war debts.

What is the matter with these university men? They hold places in which they instruct not only the students in their schools, but in which they should be the leaders of the enlightened thought of their country. And yet they lend the prestige of their high position to such balderdash that the half literate man in the street must mock their pretensions to wisdom.

What is the matter with them? Do they feel that "to find your soul" you must lose your sense? Are they intoxicated with a sort of idealistic, altruistic exaltation which leads them to proclaim such un-American views? Or are they just sordidly seeking after the endowments which may be won from the international bankers and other men of wealth?

Princeton and Williams are American schools with American students. But they do not stand alone among private institutions of learning in the United States in that they have presidents with such false ideas. The utterances of Drs. Hibben and Garfield are typical of far too large a class of American educators, of American professors and American university presidents. They have brought discredit not only upon their own schools, but upon the whole system of private colleges and universities.

The men who agree with Dr. Hibben are out of touch with Americanism. Those who agree with Dr. Garfield are out of touch with democracy. Both groups are in effect unpatriotic. Both groups are equally unfitted to make patriotic citizens out of the young men intrusted to their care.

Both groups are examples of the great weakness of private institutions for higher education. The necessity for the solicitation of private funds too often makes weak professors and presidents subservient to the sources of those funds. Too often they accept and pass on to their students the un-American and un-democratic views that animate their rich donors.

That is where the State-supported colleges have their great advantage. In the State institutions, the presidents and the professors must look, not to Wall Street and to Wealth, for the dollars that are to be dropped into the extended mortar-board, but to the People.

It is this contract with the people which makes the State universities the disseminators of honest patriotism and honest democracy. It makes them, at the same time, the greatest asset of the States which have been wise enough to establish and maintain them.

State colleges are just as important as public schools—more important than public roads and waterways. But they should be supported with a generosity that will make private schools unnecessary—that will put them so high above the private colleges that the latter will no longer be able to permit un-American professors to preach the un-American doctrines of their un-American supporters.

In that way—and in that way alone—can we send forth from our schools of higher learning men filled with patriotic ideals and with a true conception of the democracy upon which their country is founded and upon which it has grown great.

Coal Situation Worse

The coal situation grows worse in New England, and Senator Walsh advises the seizure of the coal by the State wherever they find it hoarded and to distribute it equitably among the people. This is a very good measure of desperation. But even if it is adopted it will be a poor makeshift.

The trouble with our coal situation is with the railroads and with the gentlemen who are sending coal to Canada while our own people freeze.

What New England needs is what the three allied Prime Ministers told the American government that the world needed during the war, THE GOVERNMENT OPERATION OF THE RAILROADS.

New England is freezing for coal just as the French and Italian armies were starving for grain because our railroads under private operation did not function. The roads under private management had utterly failed to carry out their part of the war work. They were months behind in the transportation of grain to the ships lying idly in the harbors waiting to carry it to the hungry soldiers in Europe. The government then took possession of the railroads and soon made them perform their part in the winning of the war.

Then, most unfortunately, almost tragically for the country, the government gave back the railroads to their old private managers and in a very few weeks had to be called in again to get them out of the freight jam into which they were immediately plunged by their private managers.

Now, if Senator Walsh and other gentlemen of prominence would get the government to take possession of the railroads between the coal mines and New England and operate them, we should soon have all the coal we needed. It took the government six weeks to supply the allied fighting front with the grain it was promised. It took them nine weeks to make up the arrears in grain which had accumulated under private operation of the railroads.

It would probably take our government not more than two weeks even at this late day to fill every bin in New England. It is not scarcity of coal. It is the scarcity of railroad engines in good repair and railroad cars which is making this difficulty.

ON KEEPING YOURSELF ALIVE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

IF you are one of the rare persons not won over to motion pictures and their individual and social function, you may not care to read this article.

You are likely, nevertheless, to be a lover of human beings and to be correspondingly interested in whatever benefits your humblest fellows.

Read this story, then, of the healing, helpful, stimulating influence of a motion picture—any old movie.

The physician who visits the Passaic, N. J., Almshouse recently tried an experiment. He noted the thirty odd and old inmates were losing appetite, mental interest and vitality. He decided to give them a stimulant.

Nothing illegal, of course. On a certain night in November a motion picture sheet was rigged up in the almshouse and the old folks were treated to a movie thriller.

A number of them had never before seen a motion picture. They were intensely excited. They laughed, cried, cheered, applauded.

This suggests the desirability of giving yourself all the new experiences you can get, to the end of keeping and making yourself increasingly "alive."

That is to say, if you want to defy age. Even if your muscles stiffen and your arteries grow hard, you can keep your mind alert, your spirit responsive and tender.

PILGRIMS' STATUE IS PLANNED

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Americans and Britishers are co-operating in a movement to erect an imposing monument on the south side of the River Humber, on the east coast of England, to mark the spot from whence the Pilgrim Fathers departed for New England.

Mr. J. Gront, United States Consul at Hull, states in connection with the scheme that he has received a large block of granite from Plymouth, New England, which had been cut from the original spot on which the Pilgrims landed, and it was hoped to include this in the monument, which would take the form of an obelisk, and would serve as a miniature Statue of Liberty to ships sailing up the Humber.

The Case of Arbuckle

Editor Boston American:

The case of Arbuckle has deeply interested me ever since I first read of it in the Boston American. While I always read of the "new discovery" and sensational report I always in my mind wished for fair play for this man who caused so many happy moments for the kiddies and grownups alike.

I would like to ask if there was ever anything connected with an Arbuckle picture shown under New England censorship or public opinion that contained any inkling of detrimental value to the motion picture fan.

It seems to me that church people as a whole have formed the greater part of the opposition to Arbuckle pictures that might be shown in the future. In my opinion if the church people do not accept the earnest efforts of this man to come back and lead a good, honest, clean life, they are directly turning against the teachings of their Christian leader who so many times said: "Repent ye, and all will be forgiven," and many similar phrases to this effect.

Again, it would only be a show of disapproval of our lawmakers who found that Arbuckle was "NOT GUILTY." The protestors should remember that they personally are liable to accusation of any crime by any person but that does not mean that they are really in error. We should abide by the decision of the law.

It has been my experience in visitations among prisoners to learn of their sentences and somewhat of the crime committed and the circumstances, and thinking to myself, not hearsay, but from actual knowledge of acts and deeds of acquaintances and fellow townsmen, I could safely say: "The only difference between the prisoner and the rest of us is that they happened to fall into the hands of the law, while some of the others were more fortunate."

It is my ardent wish that we all think deeply before we condemn a fellow being. Rather give him another opportunity, and thereby set the example for the younger folk who, no doubt, are wondering what has happened to their erstwhile beloved comedian.

WILLIAM CARLETON.

Worcester.

BRITISH ISLES GETTING DRY

Dublin, Dec. 28.—There was a marked decrease in the consumption of alcoholic drink in Great Britain and Ireland in the first six months of last year, as compared with the similar period in 1921, according to the report of the Alliance for the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic, just completed.

The drink bill was down £26,000,000. These figures do not, however, indicate a growth of temperate habits. C. B. Wilson, secretary of the Alliance, stated that the decreases are due to the continuance of high prices, coupled with the prevailing unemployment and shortness of money.

One boy emerged from the Elks' Christmas party for Winthrop kids with a top. He met a chum. They wanted another top. They took the upper or spring part off the top. The second boy went in and showed his top of a top, minus a bottom. He was given the missing part from another top. Then he went back by another door, and showed the bottom part of the top. He secured an upper part. Then the two lads had two tops.

Large quantities of high-grade clay are being scooped up by excavators preparing the foundation for the new First National Bank building at Milk and Devonshire streets. In old times, when there were brickyards galore around Boston, this would have been fashioned into building material, but today it is practically mere waste.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON DANTE'S BUST

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE new Italian Premier, Mussolini, has been likened to Napoleon. One reported act of his is certainly Napoleonic. He has ordered that in all Italian embassies and legations a bust of Dante shall be displayed. No common man would have given such an order.

An ordinary politician might have directed that pictures or busts of Victor Emmanuel be distributed among the foreign representatives of Italy for use in their offices and reception rooms, "as a symbol of the mother country" (which it was Mussolini's interpretation of the Dante busts), but could a politician have risen to the height of such a conception as that a poet might be the truest symbol of his native land? But ideas of that quality were not above the level of Napoleon's mentality and therein at least Mussolini seems to resemble the great Corsican.

Of course, there was a deeper thought behind, also notably Napoleonic, viz., cultivating through this symbol in the hearts of the Italians residing in foreign countries, of a deep-rooted devotion to Italy as a historic nation, resting on many centuries of impressive development; in short, a racial nation, with a literature that has had time to grow up to greatness.

And Mussolini's is almost a unique act. It could not easily, or even properly, have been performed in another country, for in how many lands has any poet, or any author of literature, risen so far that he alone might appropriately stand for his motherland? Have we had such a man in our literature? Is there any American poet to compete with Washington as the symbolic figure of his country? Can even Lincoln stand there? Possibly we are a trifle overshadowed by Washington.

Does an English Premier think of selecting Shakespeare's bust as the most suitable sculptural adornment of British legations the world around? If done it would have a certain appropriateness, but hardly to the same degree as with Dante standing for Italy. Tolstoy, perhaps, might be an acceptable representative of Russia, not historically but prophetically.

There is immense power in a sculptured likeness more than in a painted one. It possesses more majesty, more commanding force. You will observe that the great men of antiquity appear on our mantels and desks represented by busts, almost never on our walls by painted portraits. At first thought it may seem that the sole reason for this is one of simple convenience, because the busts are readily to be found, while the portraits do not exist on the market. But that is not the fundamental reason.

People would prefer sculptured representations of the great personage of ancient Greece, Egypt and Rome, even if they could as easily have painted portraits of them. There is more that is grand and imposing and less that is frivolous in sculptured forms and faces than in painted ones. The higher our reason for the character of the person represented, and the more symbolical of an age, a cause, or a country he appears to us to be, the better we are satisfied with the selection of his merely transitory, temporary and trivial traits, and the enhancement of the more fundamental qualities of the personality which sculpture produces.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in Lives of Famous Women

How Mrs. Luther Trimmed the First Christmas Tree

IN GERMANY, as in most European countries before the Reformation, many young women of noble and aristocratic families entered convents if they did not marry exceedingly young.

Catherine von Bora was one of these German girls who took the veil and lived the quiet life of a nun in a cloistered convent.

While she dwelt within these quiet walls, Germany and the rest of the civilized world were in a state of upheaval and religious revolt.

The person responsible for

this turmoil was a young man. He was a brilliant monk, who had been originally a student of the law. But his religious fervor drew him with such force that he had renounced the world and had entered a monastery.

While there, studying and teaching, great light came into his soul. He wished to worship God as he chose, and to let everyone read and study the Bible. He was greatly moved. He felt a driving desire to emancipate people from what he believed in these days was spiritual bondage.

Finally his chance came. Agents were sent through Germany to sell indulgences or pardons for sin. Luther was incensed. He believed that forgiveness could not be purchased with money. He preached against it in his pulpit at Wittenburg.

Breaking all rules of the church, Luther wrote ninety-five theses against the commercial proceeding, and pasted them on the door of a church.

This started the Reformation.

Luther went on preaching and reforming. Among his beliefs was the one that ministers should marry. He married the young nun, Catherine von Bora, in the year 1525.

Catherine was twenty-four years old. With eight other nuns she had been converted to the teachings of the Reformation, and had left the convent.

This was a happy marriage. Six children were born to Martin Luther and his wife.

There is a certain Christmas, when he was very poor; that Martin Luther invented the idea of the Christmas tree!

One Christmas eve, Martin Luther was coming home. He felt the grandeur of the night, and was impressed by the beauty of the fir trees with the sparkling over them.

He stopped and cut a small fir tree and dragged it home and into the nursery where his small children greeted him with wonder and joy.

Luther told his wife about the beautiful idea he had conceived. Together they placed the Christmas tree on the nursery table and hung candles on it and lighted them.

When you look at the Christmas tree in your home, think of Martin Luther and his loving wife. Your Christmas might not have been so picturesque if the Luthers had not had a Christmas tree, and had not established the custom which the Christian world has copied.
